Sinclair Receives Enthusiastic Reception at Stadium

The Sinclair-Downey meeting at the San Diego stadium last Sunday was attended by approximately 5,000 interested citizens.

The introductory speakers were O. C. Ludwig, city attorney of Chula Vista, candidate for assemblyman from the 80th district; Paul Richie, candidate for assemblyman, 79th district; Mrs. Eleanor A. Weymiller, candidate for assemblyman, 78th district; Dr. E. B. McGregor, candidate for state senator.

State candidates who spoke were George Edward Acret, candidate for associated justice of the State Supreme Court, who said his opponent, Ira F. Thompson, "represents the power trust;" Orfa Jean Shontz, candidate for the State Board of Equalization; Patrick J. Cooney, candidate for attorney general, who has eight children, and Sheridan Downey, candidate for lieutenant-governor. Louis C. Martyn, editor of the Epic News, was another speaker.

Dr. E. H. Calvert, supervisor of the Sinclair campaign in San Diego county, was chairman.

Sinclair, Epic leader and originator of this plan to End Poverty In California, met with a hearty welcome from the audience who stood and cheered his entrance to the speakers' stand. He commenced his talk as follows:

"My enemies are saying that I am making money from this campaign, that's interesting. As a matter of fact, I am $1,700 in the hole, and it can't go on much longer without your help, because I have only $100 left in the bank.

"I am not backed by wealth and by the interests as my opponents seem to be. They can go on the radio and into the press and conduct expensive campaigns, but we have to do what we can."

For one of his opponents—Justus Wardell of San Francisco, he had the following to say:

"He says I'm a Communist and that I am an agent of Moscow, at the gate as I came in, there were Communists distributing handbills denouncing me. I hear the police had to drive them away. I am sorry about that. I don't want anyone driven from my meetings."

"Never in my life have I written or uttered a word that indicated I ever wavered in my support of the Constitution.

The 'Sinclair' Plan

"The government has taken my plan and is applying it in the District of Columbia. And it is working among 80,000 people there. Take that and show it to Wardell and old man Dockweiler. That is part of the New Deal. The EPIC plan IS the New Deal in California."

Mr. Sinclair said he called on Acting Gov. Frank F. Merriam and urged him to apply the EPIC plan in California now.

"But he didn't take it. Maybe he thinks it's better to let this million people starve and the state go bankrupt. Maybe in six months he will change his mind. Maybe you people will change it for him."

Approval and prolonged applause followed.

"Shall we continue to leave the state government in the hands of the exploiters of the people, or shall we give the government back to the people?"

And out of the crowd spread over the west end of the stadium came back the answer:

". . . . . back to the people!"

There are two major projects that would be launched at once "if the people are victorious," declared Sinclair. These are:

"1.—To put unemployed persons at productive labor and make them self-supporting.

"2.—Change the tax system so the state would get the money where it is and not where it isn't, 'as is done now.'"

Taxes on the higher income brackets and inheritance taxes would be among the forms resorted to and the sales tax would be abolished.

The Matton Act situation would be taken care of at once, he said.

Following Sinclair on the program was J. Stitt Wilson, ex-minister and former mayor of Berkeley, California who brought an enthusiastic message to the assemblage, which closed after a three hour session, with Upton Sinclair answering questions of those who had points of his program they wished to have made clear.

A call during the meeting for those unemployed to raise their hands disclosed about one thousand arms raised and the speaker said that nearly forty percent of the residents of California at this time were either upon public charity or depending upon relatives and friends for their subsistance.

Funeral services were held Tuesday at Bonham Bros. for Eliza C. Barnes wife of Alpha Barnes. She was aged 74, mother of Mrs. Ida Davis, Elzie H. Barnes of Pacific Beach and other children living elsewhere; a sister of Frank J. Haveisen of Ocean Beach.

MUSINGS WHILE MEANDERING

(By Merrill Stuart)

Twilight, softly slow and glamorous. I'm not alone within my garden. 'Tis the birds' hour, as well as mine. Guests, these tiny spirits of the invisible choir; companionship in their bright sounds and colors.

* * * * * *

Splash of water upon parched foliage and thirsting roses. Dainty hummingbirds poised above, wings glistening in spray; mockingbirds in musical mockery; covey of quail crooning sleepily in acacia tree; orioles guarding cradle-like nest in a palm; wild canaries flitting furtively; meadow lark's heartbreaking sweetness in the open spaces; robber roadrunner with wary eye and bobbing tail. And birds and birds in freshly-filled overflowing bird basin, all splashing fearlessly, joyously.

* * * * * *

Twilight descending, blue dusk falling. Fainter now the carolling; lower the whispering leaves; freshness of dampened earth. Scarlet glow of day's brilliance fading to mauve, purple, gray. Slender moon in lonely sky; ever watchful stars. Silence. A hushed and hidden world. Repose upon the hilltop. Far below the troublous world — forgotten. Then sadness — it is not known why.

* * * * * *

With eventide come musings — upon life's purpose, its meaning and its sorrows. Comes soon the gladsome thought: Might I not in some twilight hour capture that wild bird, happiness, and imprison him forevermore within my breast? Ah, he might even fly right into the Little House of the Wide-open Door! Who shall say he will not?

* * * * * *

The young-old gentlemen of this town aren't far behind the young-old ladies, either!

* * * * * *

There's that one who made violins and read profound treatises on far religions. Often I listened to words of wisdom as he worked. Where has he gone, I wonder? Another one who patrols the beach for all manner of things, classifying, storing them away. "Keep anything long enough, and it'll come in handy" said he to me. Then a certain vigorous man who puts energy and intelligence into his vegetable garden each day; good vegetables; I know because I've eaten 'em! A neighbor, jovial and kindly, puttering the hours thru that his grounds may be neatest, hedge clippiest, lawn greenest. "I'd croak if I ever had to work in a city again!" he volunteered. That clever lad of 75 or thereabouts who found a new way to root bouganvillea vine and make it grow; one skillful cabinetmaker with crippled hands; a retired minister; a philosophical doctor who no longer dispenses pills. The list is long! And how happy and useful they all are, these young-old citizens in our serene sea village!

* * * * * *

Discovered a little circulating library on our main street. Within, other than magazines and books — a lady with sweet voice and surpassing courtesy. Drawing cards are they. I shall go there again very soon to browse, and buy "1,000,000 Guinea Pigs" if I can.

* * * * * *

"Anthony Adverse" is to be filmed. Just how that voluminous young man can be compressed into an hour and a half's screen entertainment, and just how he will fit into the new movie housecleaning edicts, will be interesting to find out.

A little boy, long since gone, once asked when first he saw an old-fashioned charlotte russe, "Is it a pudding with a collar on, mother?"

DOCTORS TELL OF TRIPS TO OTHER PARTS

At Wednesday noon luncheon held at Ocean Village cafe, Dr. John W. Wilhoit told of his recent two weeks spent in San Francisco receiving government instruction at the General Letterman hospital.

Dr. and Mrs. Wilhoit arrived in Frisco in time to "enjoy" a few inconveniences caused by the longshoremen's strike. He said that only milk and bread trucks were running and that at their home auto court they were rationed five gallons of gasoline to last them a week. Shows and restaurants were closed, however, they enjoyed getting away for a short time and much good was received from the daily instruction and observation at the hospital as well as association with friends of former days.

Dr. F. R. Felt gave a short sketch of his trip east a few weeks ago to attend the National Medical association meeting. Of his visits to Detroit and New York City. His trip was taken when he thought hot weather prevailed generally but in view of the rise in temperature the last two weeks he is pleased that he missed the worst of the blast that has stricken the middle states and returned to the west coast where every day is just about right.

J. H. Westover of the Yuma, Arizona club said that conditions in his section were picking up and that though they were having a water shortage the people generally were in better spirits and satisfied the new deal was to their advantage. All farm and orchard crops have sold at a profit this year and prospects are brighter for everyone in Arizona.

A. W. G. Treais of the east San Diego club was a welcome visitor and led the members in some rousing songs

ELECTRIC EQUIPMENT STOLEN

The Theosophical Institute reported to local police last week that some time between June 29 and July 17, someone had entered a store house near the Greek theatre where electric equipment is kept and had stolen two large stop lights, three 1,000 watt projection lamps, one 500 watt projection lamp and one AC volt meter.

The total value of the equipment was said to be $104.50, and had been used at the outdoor Greek theatre.

The horse shoe court is growing in interest with checkers and cards as an added attraction.

JUNE BEVERAGE TAX IS $132,372.29

Californian Sees China at Fair

A. J. Allen, Ocean Beach, Cal., world traveler, author and lecturer, visits the Chinese Pavilion at A Century of Progress. Mr. Allen has attended every important exposition of the world in the past 50 years and says that the present World's Fair surpasses any other ever held. He has crossed the Atlantic 37 times and is at precent on a lecture tour which will take him to the Atlantic seaboard and back to California through the old south and the scenic southwest. OCEAN BEACH FOLKS ENJOYING CHICAGO WORLD'S FAIR

A card under date of July 18, from A. J. Allen, well known Ocean Beach traveler, says his party has been at Chicago five days enjoying the wonderful fair. The News had a special privilege at the fair which was turned over to Allen before he left and he says he is still acting as "special reporter" and will write more about the fair later.

FISHING PIER APPEARS IDEAL SERA PROJECT

Beach Project Not Considered As Depriving Workers Of Wages.

(By Jack Wright)
(The Sun Labor Editor)

Many members of organized labor feel that the construction of a recreation pier at Ocean Beach would be an ideal SERA project. While San Diego labors needs every bit of available employment, it could not be said this proposed project would deprive anyone of wages for without SERA help it is unlikely the pier could even be thought of.

An unofficial canvass of local Unionists brings out many complimentary remarks on the recent action of the city council in authorizing soundings at the beach from which a cost estimate will be based.

Let's hope this proposed project will go over. It will be enjoyed by many.

POINT LOMA HIGH STUDENTS DOING WELL IN NAVY

Former Point Loma high school students headed the list of 118 Navy recruits who took the difficult general classification examinations at the Naval Training station recently.

George Bergman was first, while Marion Baker and Raymond Harriman were very close to the top. Each finished high in one or more of the six exams which included mechanical aptitude, spelling, English, mathematics, genral classificatin, and penmanship.

These boys leave the station Aug. 1. They will be given 10 days recruit leave, then will await assignment to ships, with prospects of traveling to the east coast via Panama and Cuba, to meet the fleet on its homeward trip sometime in September

Fishing Pier Plans May Be Ready Monday

Messrs. Albert Dumont, Harry Bailey and Schroder attended meeting of the city council Monday morning, looking after interest of Ocean Beach fishing pier. They report that apparently prospects are very favorable though as yet no plans have been prepared and presented. These it is hoped will be ready by next Monday.

City Manager Lockwood told the council it was not feasable to make borings with temporary equipment. He is going ahead with plans for a permanent structure anyway. He also said it might be necessary to carry the pier out 1200 feet instead of 1,000 in order to reach deeper water for more satisfactory fishing conditions.

The News has been informed that the project has been passed upon by SERA and they are ready to go ahead with their share of the work and some of the material. While this hardly seems possible before the plans come from the City Manager's office, it shows considerable interest is being taken in getting a pier at Ocean Beach.

Endorsement of this project by union labor is good to hear, an article from the San Diego Sun being found elsewhere in this issue by Jack Wright, labor editor.

Let's all keep up an interest and talk this pier with our friends and acquaintances until it is a reality.

ABBOTT STREET GROCERY HAS NEW OWNERSHIP

Mrs. Alice Riddell of San Diego a few weeks ago succeeded E. W. A. B. Stoten to the Abbott street grocery and on August 1, will take into partnership her daughter, Mrs. Irene Tyler.

Mrs. Riddell is a native of Hutchinson, Kansas, where in the early days Indians and buffalos were plentiful, however, she has been a resident of San Diego for 20 years past.

Mr. Stoten expected to leave for British Columbia when he sold his business.

"Second Revolution" Smashed by Hitler and Its Leaders Put to Death—Roosevelt Names Five Boards and Sails Away.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

FOREWARNED of a radical plot within the National Socialist party to bring about a second revolution in Germany, Chancellor Adolf Hitler struck with swiftness and ruthlessness that completely smashed the revolt on the eve of the planned coup d'etat and left the malcontents, chiefly members of the Storm troopers, dazed and terrified. The Chancellor himself exhibited resolution and personal bravery with which the world had not credited him.

Chancellor Hitler

Flying from Berlin to Munich in the night, Hitler with only two bodyguards went direct to the summer home of Capt. Ernst Roehm, commander of the brown shirts and long his personal friend. Roehm and certain of his associates were found in situations that confirmed the often heard stories of their moral perversion, and as Hitler was certain also of their complicity in the revolutionary plot, he personally arrested Roehm, tore off his insignia and offered him a chance to commit suicide. This Roehm refused, so on Hitler's order he was shot to death, as were the others taken with him. Meanwhile, Gen. Hermann Wilhelm Goering, premier of Prussia, directed a series of raids throughout the country that resulted in the deaths of numerous prominent members of the conspiracy and the arrest of scores. Chief among those shot down was Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, Hitler's predecessor as chancellor and reputed head of the revolutionary plot. His wife stepped in the way of the policemen's bullets and also died. Well-known Storm troop leaders in Munich and elsewhere were put to death summarily, and so was Heinrich Klausener, head of the Catholic Action party.

Vice Chancellor Franz von Papen, who had recently attacked the radical tendencies of the Nazis, was put under heavy guard, and forbidden to leave his home, and two of his adjutants killed themselves.

Von Papen offered to resign from the cabinet, but President Von Hindenberg, his close friend, refused to accept the resignation, and the cabinet urged him to remain as minister without portfolio to supervise activities in the Saar. Von Papen, however, will take a protracted leave of absence.

Viktor Lutze was appointed to succeed Roehm as chief of staff of all the reichswehr units, including the Storm troops among whom the disaffection had existed and the regular army, which was declared to be entirely loyal to Hitler.

Viktor Lutze

President Von Hindenburg all this time was at his estate at Neudeck, East Prussia, and there were reports of his serious illness, which were flatly denied. Two days after the chancellor's drastic action the aged president telegraphed Hitler and Goering his approval of their course, congratulated them on their victory and thanked them in the name of the nation. Undoubtedly, Hitler's personal position was strengthened for the time being, and the leftist elements in the Nazi party were weakened and divided. Goering and Hitler professed pity for the "misled" Storm troopers, but the latter are now out of their uniforms temporarily and may never be as important as they have been in the past. They had become something like a pretorian guard that threatened Hitler's supremacy.

In various European capitals there were predictions of further outbreaks in Germany and the return of the Hohenzollerns.

Hitler's "violent" methods were criticized by Engelbert Dollfuss, Austria's dictator, who said: "Does not the light at last dawn upon us that one cannot make a people happy with violent methods?"

Paris interpreted the affair as a victory for conservatives and as opening the possibility for a return of the Hohenzollerns. The violence, it was claimed, revealed a breakdown in the unity of the Hitler movement.

In London the view was taken that Hitler had solidified his position. Some papers accused him of employing the methods of gangsters and called the slaying of storm-troop leaders "brutal murders."

TRADE war between Great Britain and Germany was averted by the signing of an agreement protecting British interests during the reich's six months foreign obligations moratorium, ordered in effect July 1.

Under the accord, Germany agrees to pay Young and Dawes plan obligations when due in October, November and December, on presentation of coupons on bonds by the Bank of England.

For six months, beginning July 1, the German government is to provide sterling funds to the Bank of England for the purchase in full at the nominal value of all coupons on these loans held by British subjects on June 15, when the moratorium was disclosed.

JAPAN'S cabinet resigned as a result of a financial scandal involving a vice minister, and the emperor called on Prince Saionji, last of the elder statesmen, for advice in selecting a new premier. The prince recommended Admiral Keisuke Okada for the place and the emperor made the appointment, which was generally considered very wise. Okada asked Koki Hirota to remain as foreign minister, and the minister of war and navy also were reappointed. The new government is expected to follow the general lines of policy laid down by Saito, retiring premier. One of its chief aims will be to clean up graft.

Japanese naval circles are convinced that Okada is the only man capable of safely piloting the nation through the naval conference next year. They feel that Saionji selected Okada because he realized that the conference will be of the utmost importance to Japan's future.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT departed on his cruise to the Caribbean and Hawaii aboard the Houston, accompanied by his two younger sons, Franklin, Jr., and John; Rudolph Forster of the White House secretarial staff; Commander Ross T. McIntire, naval physician; Gus Gennerich, personal bodyguard; Richard Jervis, secret service man, and Pharmacist's Mate George Fox. On accompanying destroyers are two secret service men and three representatives of three big press associations.

J. M. Landis

Before sailing the President performed these seven important acts:

Approved the Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage moratorium bill.

Approved the railroad unemployment and pension act involving additional burdens of millions of dollars on the carriers.

Appointed Joseph Kennedy, wealthy New York stock operator as chairman of the new securities exchange commission for a five-year term, and George C. Mathews, James M. Landis, Robert E. Healy and Ferdinand Pecora as members for terms ranging from four years downward.

Named Eugene O. Sykes, Thad H. Brown, Paul Walker, Norman Case, Irvin Stuart, George Henry Payne and Hampson Gary members of the new communications commission for terms ranging from seven years downward.

Set up the new national labor relations board with Lloyd Garrison, dean of the University of Wisconsin law school, chairman, and Prof. Henry Alvin Mills, head of the economics department at the University of Chicago, and Edward S. Smith of Massachusetts, labor relations specialist, as the other members.

Named James A. Moffett, former vice president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and a member of the planning and co-ordinating committee of the oil conservation board, as administrator of the new $1,000,000,000 housing program.

Appointed five members of a commission to study federal aviation and air mail affairs and make recommendations to the next congress—Clark Howell, Atlanta, Ga., publisher; Jerome Clarke Hunsaker, New York; Edward P. Warner, Washington, D. C.; Franklin K. Lane, Jr., California, and Albert J. Berres, California.

MR. ROOSEVELT went ashore for the first time on his cruise at Cape Haitien, Haiti, where he was met by President Stenio Vincent and other officials of the island republic. At the Union club he made an address, partly in French, in which he announced the forthcoming withdrawal of the marines, adding that he hoped they would be remembered as friends who had tried to help Haiti. Marine detachments have been on duty in Haiti, whose population is 90 per cent colored, since 1915.

MME. MARIE CURIE, co-discoverer with her husband of radium and rated as one of the world's greatest women, passed away at Passy in the French Alps at the age of sixty-six years. Her physicians said that her inability to recover from an attack of pernicious anemia was probably due to the fact that her bone structure was weakened by years of exposure to radium and X-rays.

The Netherlands was thrown into mourning by the death of Prince Consort Henry. He was married to Queen Wilhelmina in 1901 and the Dutch people had learned to love him deeply.

ATTEMPTS to open the port of San Francisco, closed for some time by the dock workers' strike, resulted in bloody riots in which several men were killed and many injured. Gov. Frank Merriman called out 2,000 National Guardsmen.

PRIME MINISTER RAMSAY MACDONALD of Great Britain, who is in Scotland on a vacation, was bitterly assailed in the house of lords by Viscount Snowden, former chancellor of exchequer and once close personal friend of the premier. Snowden denounced MacDonald as a traitor to his colleagues in the Labor party and to the country.

"The cabinet found the prime minister such an amenable instrument of Tory policy," Snowden declared, "that it has come to the conclusion that there are no professions which he made, no pledges which he gave the country which he will not repudiate, no humiliation to which he will not submit if they only allow him still to be called prime minister.

"The Tories have no use for MacDonald except for exhibiting him on their platform in chains as the one-time Socialist who has seen the error of his ways and found salvation in the spiritual home of the Tory party.

"He will be used for the same purposes as the reformed drunkard at temperance meetings."

SENATOR BORAH of Idaho, independent Republican, opened his one-man campaign against the New Deal in a radio address attacking especially bureaucracy and monopoly. Although his criticism was directed primarily against what he conceives to be these elements in the New Deal, he summarily indicted the national leadership of the Republican party on the ground that it "seems wholly unwilling to touch this vital issue"—namely, the monopolistic trend.

Senator Borah

The senator said the Roosevelt regime was establishing not Nazism, not Fascism, not Communism, but "simply that meddlesome, irritating, confusing, undermining, destructive thing called bureaucracy." And bureaucracy he defined as "that form of government which steals away man's rights in the name of the public interest and taxes him to death in the name of recovery." Bureaucracy, the Idaho senator asserted, "has destroyed every civilization upon which it has fastened its lecherous grip."

It is the common man who will be the chief victim of our new bureaucratic form of government, the Idahoan asserted. The influential and powerful have demonstrated that they "can generally obtain all the rights and privileges they desire under any form of government." But the "freedom and political rights" of the toilers are being more and more limited, whether under European dictatorships or the American bureaucracy.

WINDING up its fiscal year, the federal government found that, counting emergency expenses, it had spent about $4,000,000,000 more than it had collected. Balancing receipts against ordinary expenditures, the government figured it was $28,000,000 "in the black" for the year.

President Roosevelt has estimated nearly $5,000,000,000 would be added to the national debt by emergency expenses during the next 12 months. This was predicated on recovery that would make industrial production average 98 per cent of the 1923-25 level.

In July, 1935, the President hopes to start the payoff for the recovery program. By that time, he has said, the budget should be balanced.

According to the federal reserve board's index, the industrial production figure for the year just ended was slightly above the 81 per cent average on which the President based his hopes.

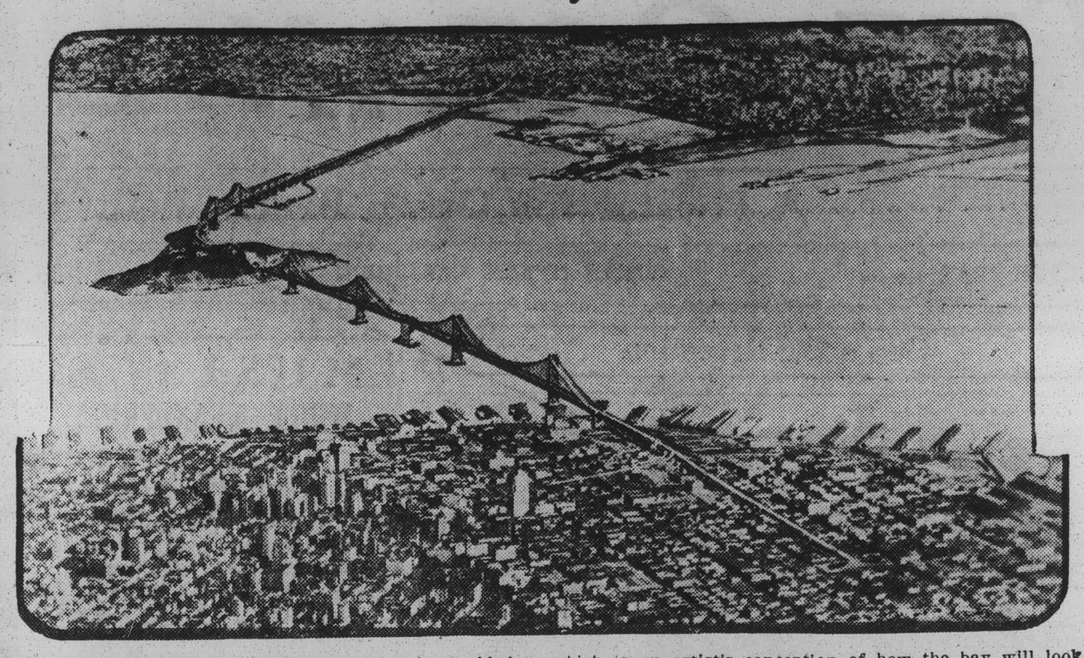
TWO events in recent days have emphasized the friendship that exists between the United States and Canada. The first was the dedication of the new International bridge spanning the St. Lawrence between Roosevelttown, N. Y., and Cornwell, Canada. Secretary of War Dern represented President Roosevelt at the ceremony, and the earl of Bessborough, governor general, was there for the Dominion.

The second event, on July 4, was the return to the Canadian government of the mace of the parliament of upper Canada that was taken during the War of 1812, at the battle of York, and had been in the Naval academy at Annapolis ever since. On recommendation of President Roosevelt congress authorized the restitution of the mace. Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the bureau of navigation, accompanied by his aid, Lieut. Com. Ernest H. von Heimburg, made the presentation at Toronto and attended the unveiling of a monument erected by the United States' Daughters of 1812, to the memory of General Pike and others of the United States' forces killed during that war.

THERE was a general scattering of administration chieftains following the departure of President Roosevelt. Secretary Roper went to Alaska and Secretary Morgenthau to a Montana ranch. Secretary Dern sailed for the Canal Zone, and Secretary Swanson and Attorney General Cummings were down on the lower Potomac on yachts. Secretary Hull took motor rides in the Virginia mountains. Secretary Farley was in New York, and Secretary Wallace went to Chautauqua. Secretaries Ickes and Perkins remained at their job. General Johnson went to Saratoga Springs for a rest, Harry Hopkins sailed for Europe and Professor Tugwell went to the Far West. Lesser lights also left Washington.

MEXICO elected a new constitutional president—Gen. Lazaro Cardenas—and it was the quietest election in the country's history.

How San Francisco Bay Soon Will Appear

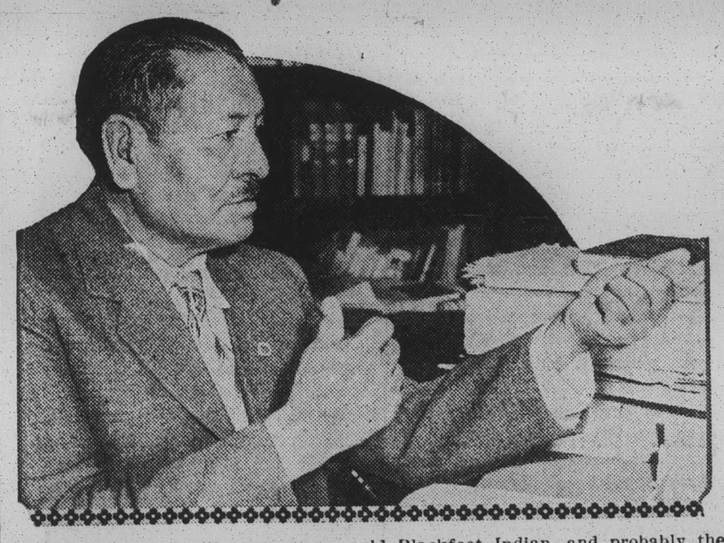


Here is an aerial view of San Francisco bay, added to which is an artist's conception of how the bay will look when the great bridge from San Francisco to Yerba Buena island and thence to Oakland is completed.

Texas Independence Centennial Coin

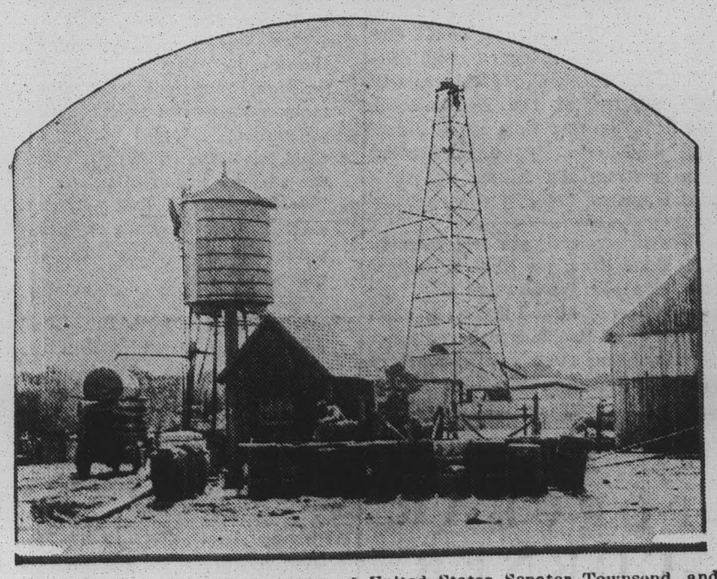
Pompeo Coppini, sculptor, with his models for the commemorative coin in celebration of the Texas Independence Centennial, 1836-1936. Congress authorized the Treasury department to issue one and a half million commemorative half dollars, which the Texas department of the American Legion will undertake to sell for a dollar each. The money realized will be applied to the building of a Texas State Memorial museum on the university grounds at Austin.

Making Sign Language Lexicon



Richard Sanderville, seventy-year-old Blackfoot Indian, and probably the greatest living authority on what ethnologists regard as one of the most remarkable systems of communication known to man, has been brought to Washington by the Smithsonian institution to complete a sign language dictionary which was left half finished by the death of Maj. Gen. Hugh L. Scott, veteran Indian fighter and peacemaker. The sign Mr. Sanderville is making in the photograph means "gun."

Oil Strike on a Delaware Farm



This well, drilled on the farm of United States Senator Townsend, and which struck oil at 400 feet, may be the start of an oil rush in Bridgeville, Del., to compare with those in many a Texas or Oklahoma village. The well was drilled by the Cleveland Petroleum company, which has been studying the region for the past seven years and which has bought up options on farms within a radius of several miles of the strike.

Old Box Causes Court Case

Two women, charged with theft, recently were tried in Glamorgan, Wales. For two hours the jury listened to counsel questioning witnesses, four of whom had traveled 50 miles. After the judge summed up the case, and the jury had duly deliberated, it declared the woman not guilty. The theft consisted of taking a dilapidated wooden box. It was valued at 12 cents.

Diamond Needle

Though it will easily pierce your finger, the ordinary sewing needle appears anything but sharp under the microscope, and the diameter at the point usually measures several thousandths of an inch. Now engineers have produced a needle with a point one ten-thousandth of an inch across. The actual point is a diamond set in the steel, and it is used to test the smoothness of polished steel.

HEAD OF A BIG JOB

R. M. Priest is chief engineer for the United States government on the All-American canal project, for which bids were opened at Yuma, Ariz. The $38,000,000 irrigation and water power project, which is expected to turn Imperial valley into a modern "Garden of Eden," will be under construction soon.

ENVOY FROM TURKEY

Great Nest Builder

Probably the most conspicuous bird of the prairie streams is the picturesque, long-tailed, black and white magpie, says Nature Magazine. He is the arch rascal of this bird community, but one of the finest of bird architects, and his giant nest of sticks, as large as a bushel basket, domed over and weather proof, with the nest cavity beautifully woven inside a cup of mud, is one of the crowning achievements in nest building.

Cloth of Glass Hailed as Scientific Triumph

So much that is unusual and that would seem almost impossible to the lay mind, is now being accomplished by modern science, one is not surprised to learn that a cloth which has all the appearance of glass is the latest product of Lancashire research. Designs in colored glass are applied without laborious handwork to velvet, silk, lace, cotton and fabrics of all kinds, imparting to them the attraction of a diamante-studded gown.

Experiments along this line have been going on for months in Manchester and they have now reached a stage that justifies actual manufacture. The new product is expected to prove an asset in Lancashire's battle against Japanese competition. The makers of the new cloth use a synthetic glass which allows the cloth to be washed or ironed without damage to its design. The cloth to be printed is simply passed through a machine which indelibly impresses on it any design that is wanted.—London Mail.

Real Bayer Aspirin at Lowest Prices in History

A new schedule of prices for Bayer Aspirin tablets has just gone into effect. The Bayer Company introduced Bayer Aspirin in this country 35 years ago. It has since become one of the most widely used of all drug products and the price reduction will mean a saving to millions of consumers.

In announcing its new consumer price schedule, the Bayer Company issued the following statement:

"Bayer has always kept faith with its customers by giving them the finest, most uniform product that science can produce. Its decision to reduce prices is evidence of Bayer's desire to extend even further its service to its customers." The new consumer prices of Bayer Aspirin are now effective in 60,000 drug stores throughout the United States. —Adv.

Quite Simple

"I want this photograph of my husband enlarged," said the rather fussy woman. "Now, can you do it with his hat off?"

The photographer looked thoughtful.

"Yes," he said at last, "I think I can manage to fake the hair all right. By the way, which side does he part his hair?"

She looked at him in surprise.

"Oh, but you'll be able to see that when you take his hat off," she blandly replied.

Mercolized Wax

BEDTIME STORY FOR CHILDREN

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE SWEET SINGER OF THE DUSK

JOLLY, round, red Mr. Sun was just going to bed behind the Purple Hills, and the Black Shadows had begun to creep all through the Green Forest and out across the Green Meadows. It was the hour of the day Peter Rabbit loved best. He sat on the edge of the Green Forest watching for the first little star to twinkle high up in the sky. Peter felt at peace with all the Great World, for it was the hour of peace, the hour of rest for those who had been busy all through the shining day. Most of Peter's feathered friends had settled themselves for the coming night, the worries and cares over and forgotten. All the Great World seemed hushed.

In the distance Sweetvoice the Vesper Sparrow was pouring out his evening song, for it was the hour when he dearly loved to sing. Far back in the Green Forest Whip-poor-will was calling as if his very life depended on the number of times he could say "Whip-poor-will" without taking a breath. From overhead now and then came the sharp, rather harsh cry of Boomer the Nighthawk as he hunted his supper in the air.

For a time it seemed as if these were the only feathered friends still awake, and Peter couldn't help thinking that those who went so early to bed missed the most beautiful hour in the whole day. Then, from a tree just back of him, there poured forth a song so clear, so sweet, so wonderfully suited to that peaceful hour that Peter held his breath until it was finished. He knew that singer and loved him. It was Melody the Wood Thrush.

Peter hopped over to the tree from which the song came. It was still light enough for him to see the sweet singer. He sat on a branch near the top, his head thrown back and his soft, full throat throbbing with the flute-like notes he was pouring forth. He was a little smaller than Welcome Robin. His coat was a beautiful reddish-brown, not quite so bright as that of Brownie the Thrasher. Beneath he was white with large, round, black spots thickly dotting his breast and sides. He was singing it as if he were trying to put into those beautiful notes all the joy of life. Listening to it, Peter felt steal over him a wonderful feeling of peace and pure happiness. Not for the world would he ever have interrupted it.

The Black Shadows crept far across the Green Meadows, and it became so dusky in the Green Forest that Peter could barely make out the sweet singer above his head. Still Melody sang on and the hush of eventide grew deeper as if all the Great World were holding its breath to listen. Peter felt sure that somewhere near was a nest, and that one thing which made that song so beautiful was the love Melody was trying to express to the little mate sitting on the eggs that nest must contain.

QUESTION BOX
By ED WYNN . . . The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I wrote you some time ago to help me solve a "Cross-Word Puzzle." I asked you for a twelve-letter word meaning "Letter Carrier," and you said "Postman." The word "Postman" only has seven letters. Where are the other five letters?

Truly yours,
WIRDFER WORD.

Answer: The other five letters are in the postman's bag.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have always heard that living in the country is much healthier than living in the city. If this is true, why is the air so much purer in the country?

Yours truly,
C. D. SOIL.

Answer: The reason the air is so pure in the country is because the farmers keep their windows closed.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I read some statistics compiled by the prohibition authorities and they claim that "whisky" kills more people than "bullets." Is this true?

Yours truly,
JOHNNY WALKER.

Answer: Yes. But that is merely because people prefer to be full of "Whisky" than full of "Bullets."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I have never traveled before, so am seeking some information. I understand that in every city there are two kinds of hotels—American and European. I know what is meant by an American hotel, but what is an European hotel?

Sincerely,
I. WILL TOUR.

Answer: You can tell a European hotel very easily. Fighting on every floor.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am a minister of a church and notice my congregation on Sunday is composed mostly of women. What do you suggest to help me get the men?

Yours truly,
I. PREACH.

Answer: Put a putting green in the rear of the church and reserve the last two rows for smoking.

The Little Brown Schoolhouse

By ANNE CAMPBELL

AROUND those brown walls my affections entwine,
Although they are standing no more.
In my memory lingers its simple design,
The windows, the thick, oaken door.
The little square panes have admitted the light
Of many a long day for me.
As I studied the "Three Rs" at home every night,
The face of my teacher I'd see.

The desks were initialed with names that are cut
On many a tall granite shaft.
The blackboards have vanished where I used to put
Gay pictures while naughty boys laughed.
Remember the globe that revolved on the shelf?
The books that were penciled and worn?
The dunce with his tall cap, who stood by himself,
The victim of scholarly scorn?

We girls wore bright aprons of gingham and print,
And when we got home every night
Our mothers would say: "Now you must do your stint,"
For our samplers were mother's delight.
The boys did the chores after school, and arose
With the first faint approach of the sun
To help in the barn . . . On their nimble bare toes
They scurried till all tasks were done.

The little brown schoolhouse! What memories rise
Of days that will not come again!
Of orchard and garden and clear sunny skies,
Broad meadows and green, winding lane.
The school bell will ring in September to call
Our children to lessons once more,
But never again will our own shadows fall
The length of the old schoolhouse floor.

Use Sour Cream

If your sweet cream sours, you need not throw it away. You can whip it just as you would sweet cream and use it in making a salad dressing. It is delicious added to any other dressing. Of course, you can also dilute it and use it in a cake batter by adding a little soda.

Welcome American Slang

However rude or crude are American terms, they are so expressive and impudently near the truth that it is hard to resist giving them a place in any honest lexicon, says the Montreal Herald. Such terms are "graft," "onceover," "foolproof" and "step on the gas." This was the explanation given by President George Gordon of Magdalen college, Oxford, England, for their inclusion in the new supplementary. Among other phrases which have been introduced into the English language in the last 50 years and given a place in the dictionary are "all of a doo da," and "give it the once over."

DR. W. E. FITCH TALKS ON MINERAL WATER

Tells Why It Is Often Helpful for "Rheumatic" Aches and Pains

EUROPEAN SCIENTISTS CONFIRM OPINION

Recently William Edward Fitch, M. D., member of the International Society of Medical Hydrology and author of that comprehensive book "Mineral Waters of the United States and American Spas" spoke as follows on a program over the National Broadcasting System:

"Drinking a mineral water is not like drinking an ordinary water, for in addition to the virtues and therapeutic value of the water itself, the combined minerals, some of which are in such infinitesimal proportions as almost to defy man's limited power of analysis, produce systemic changes which affect disease profoundly. . . . In Europe, of course, mineral water treatment has been known for thousands of years, and is universally accepted. . . . I am happy to have contributed in a small way to the spread of knowledge of this form of treatment in our own great country, for here we have the same needs as Europe's population—the same diseases, the same suffering, the same problems—and bountiful Nature has provided the same form of treatment—natural American mineral waters sparkling and bubbling from the earth, ready and able to end serious and painful disease."

When we think of what Dr. Fitch has said of the real value of mineral waters—and then think how very few people can afford to travel to America's mineral water resorts—it is very important to know about Crazy Water Crystals, and the happiness they have brought to millions suffering from "rheumatic" aches and pains and other chronic ailments. Crazy Water Crystals are just precious minerals crystallized from a great natural mineral water—a type of mineral water that has built one of America's greatest health resorts, to which 150,000 people flock every year. You just mix Crazy Water Crystals with plain water, and make a great mineral water at home.

And Crazy Water Crystals are very economical. A standard sized package costs only $1.50 and is sufficient for several weeks treatment in your own home. Crazy Water Co., Mineral Wells, Texas.

OUR ECONOMIC "SPREE"

It may not be strictly ethical at a time when all are joined in an effort to bring about a safe and sure recovery to recite some of the sad experiences of the past few years. We look back to during the years of 1928-29 and recall what was our "riotous living"—spending freely and indulging in luxuries. It was our economic spree, and the system went to pieces like a ship on an ocean reef.

Now we are trying to adjust ourselves from probably the most severe depression in history. History will record some harrowing paragraphs a decade from now, by telling of the millions of workers who were deprived of their right to earn an honest living, and thousands upon thousands of families in actual need of the subsistence of life. The thousands of bank failures entailing in untold cases, loss of life's savings, and tens of thousands of industrial and commercial concerns forced into bankruptcy. The products of our industry which were wasted, and hundreds of millions of dollars that should have gone into commerce and industry, hoarded.

This is just a brief chapter for the next edition of United States History which the pupils of our public schools will study in the future. In addition to the study of the Civil War, it will be a war-map on depression and hardship. We are going to learn the evil of transitory things, and perhaps, as Shakespeare says, that the "legacy of honesty is above all riches." Indeed, the seat of happiness is not found in the pocketbook.

We are going to come out of this economic haze better prepared to live up to our American obligation in the pursuit of happiness, by an intellectual housecleaning and with more devotion to the morale and conduct of which we are free agents.

Japan has just celebrated her 80th birthday, but that is the "New Japan" since July 14, 1853. It was followed by Perry's treaty of peace and amity. Today finds Japan heavily armed for fighting, not only for prestige and pride but for existence. She has less arable land than our own state, with a population far too large to support on her slender resources. With a birthrate of 900,000 a year Japan feels the encroaching need of more land possessions every day. Years ago when California was more unrestricted and less particular, our shores were invaded by whole steamship loads of her overflow population. At one time Japan cast ascant eves toward our shores as a means of getting colony settlements. Today they are looking our way under power of a strict immigration act. While it is not convenient or easy for them to land at our docks, Japan is obliged to keep vigilant eye and ear elsewhere to meet the growing population condition. Some day Japan must have more land if by force or conquest; yet it must and will come. With her spirit and venture we may see a small nation made great and strong, thru no small beligerent conflict.

The business man who aims to keep his commercial pride usually discounts his monthly bills by paying up within the limit of time. This is also true with corporations, companies or even municipalities and nations. While Europe thru the tactics of its leading nations, has shown a good illustration of a poor debt payer, little conscientious Finland, alone paid the United States what it owed last month, the sum of $166,538. Uncle Sam came to the rescue of all these European debtors in 1918, the same as Finland when starvation stared them in the face. United States rushed over large quantities of grain and supplies. Finland paid cash, but needed the money and it was handed back. Had the other lived up to their agreement nearly 800 million dollars would have been paid by Germany, Britain and France; but these all three defaulted without even an apology or thanks.

The swimming pool is the modern precursor of athletics, and statistics tell us that there are over 8,000 of them in America. In addition to the above the number increases with leaps and bounds. Here in Ocean Beach the open ocean surf is as popular if not a little ahead of the pool. The swimming contests must go to the swimming pool owing to the indoor fete, but general bathing exercise is better enjoyed in the breakers. People used to refuse to bathe thinking it was weakening, but now it is different; people bathe to grow healthy. The cleanliness, the air, the sunlight and the exercise all contribute to that end. But most of all,they swim because they want to. They like it. It is the finest of sports.

President Roosevelt is seeing the world with an appreciative eye. With his flavor of wit and pungency of speech, he is not only a thoro mixer, but an admirable character among all he comes in contact. Every time the President speaks he becomes a figure on fire with enthusiasm. Wherever he goes we predict he will not only be greeted with open arms, but there are indications that he will be as busy as a "tick on a turtle" wherever he goes. Thus a friendly heart finds friendship everywhere. Misery is always the portion of the miser. Life, like seed, moulds when it is kept, and multiplies when it is scattered abroad. "He who joy would win, must share it —Happiness was born a twin."

J. Whitcomb Riley, the beloved Hoosier poet, died July 22, 1916 and last Sunday was the memorial anniversary day of his death. Riley was the most sympathetic and pathes entertainer with his poetry, of any writer of his day and class. His dialect style of writing made him popular while on the staff of the Indianapolis Journal. Riley was to American verse, what Mark Twain was to American prose. A biographical edition of his works was published in 1913. Mr. Riley was born in Greenfield, Ind., in 1853. To meet the man was an inspiration, if only to look into his gentle face.

Zoo Seeks Restoration Levy For Maintainance

The Zoological Society is opening headquarters where petitions for signatures requesting that an amendment to the city charter be submitted to the vote of the people at the general election in November, may be signed. Every effort is being made to have these headquarters interesting and attractive. Supporters of the Zoological Garden have offered to give their time for keeping the office open and answering the questions which arise from those interested in the petitions.

The down town headquarters is situated at 427 B street. It will be open for the convenence of the many people who have expressed themselvestheir calls and words of encouragethir calls and words of encouragement. The society has no money to spend in advertising or paying people to carry the petition, but if there is anyone interested in helping the society to circulate them, we shall be very happy to have them call at headquarters Monday afternoon and secure blanks. These have been in circulation for some time, but no effort to secure the signatures speedily or in large numbers has been made up to the present time.

There will be, in addition to the down town headquarters, several others established in outlying districts. In La Jolla, the petition can be signed at the La Jolla Radio Shop, 7839 Girard. In Ocean Beach, headquarters have been opened in the Cora Brooks Beauty shop at 5005 Newport avenue.

The society is interested in seeing that the people have the opportunity to carry out the many expressions of solicitude at the very precarious position in which the tremendous budget cuts have placed the Zoological Garden.

Many people have the mistaken impression that the signing of these petitions gives the support of two cents on each hundred dollars assessed vaulation to the Zoological garden. This is not true. Sufficient signatures on these petitions will, however, give the people of San Diego the chance to say what they wish to do with a certain portion of their tax money. It does nothing to increase the tax rate or add burden to the taxpayer. It does say just how a certain very small part of the tax money shall be spent or budgeted by the makers of the budget

This step has been taken because it has come to the time when the society is convinced that there is no longer any use to look for adequate support under the present very broad and general provision in the charter for such institutions, which leaves the question of what is adequate to be decided by whatever political pressure can be brought to bear upon elected officials.

LITTLE BILLY BARTY AT ORPHEUM TODAY

Hero of more than one hundred feature films, Billy Barty, lovable imp of the screen, together with his entire company, has been signed as the headline attraction of the Orpheum, theatre for the stage presentation starting today.

Billy at the conclusion of his work with Eddie Cantor in "Roman Scandals" requested a leave of absence before starting a new series of features in which he is to be starred, in order to make a personal appearance tour of the Pacific Coast.

With his company Billy is making the tour, principally, to disprove the theory of many audiences that he is a midget. Instead, it is pointed out, he is in reality a child prodigy with an unusual physical make up, and an uncanny ability to snatch every picture in which he appears, from more experienced stars. His stage act is filled with laughs of the same order that he garners on the screen.

In addition the stage presentation will include five other high class vaudeville acts and Ted Mack. On the screen, two feature attractions, one of which will be the long awaited "Monte Carlo Nights" with Mary Brian and John Darrow in leading roles will be shown.

Eddie Cantor, America's premiere comedian on stage, screen and radio, comes to the Orpheum screen on Sunday for four days. United Artists have just completed remaking a reissue of Cantor's supreme screen and stage triumph "Whoopee" in magnificent technicolor and brings it to the Orpheum screen. It embodies a gorgeous array of girls, beautifully gowned with tuneful music and plenty of comedy.

In addition the Orpheum will feature Ted Mack and his band, and six acts of headline vaudeville.

WARREN - WALKER SCHOOL

Due to the many requests of parents of students enrolled in the Warren-Walker school, the summer session will be contiued thruout the month of August. Already students have been enrolled for the fall semester and many of the regular students are expected to return during the next month.

The students of the intermediate department had a beach picnic yesterday. This party was planned in order to observe the close of the first part of summer school. The picnic was held on the narrow strip of beach adjoining Sunset Cliffs. After lunch the students, armed with flashlights and walking sticks hiked over the cliffs and explored the numerous caves in the rocks. Many exciting discoveries were made and particular interest was centered on the various forms of animal and plant sea-life. Those enjoying the outing were Bill Peace, Bud Peace, Bob Gross, Arthur Velter, Pat Jones, Billy Loftus, Jean Blake, Noval Walker and Miss McIntyre.

Chadwick Trails Pair Until Final Penalty Paid

This is onother of the series of articles by Richard W. Chadwick, releasing for publication for the first time the inside details of some of San Diego's most notorious crimes. The facts and circumstances related herewith are from the personal files of Mr. Chadwick, files to which he has had occasion to refer in preparing his campaign for the office of Sheriff of this county at the coming election. Many of Mr. Chadwicks years as a peace officer have been devoted to the study of narcotics and he has served the city, county, state and national governments in supressing activities along that line. Some idea of the result of using drugs, and a glance down the road of ruin to which it leads may be gained from the following case.

For more than three months the police of this city and the officers of surrounding cities had been besieged by reports of an epidemic of burglaries, in each of which it was reported that the thief had taken articles of both large and small bulk, apparently seeing no difference in removing a heavy and clumsy victrola or radio or even electric light fixtures and in taking pens, pencils, jewelry and other articles which were lying around. Even bed spreads, laces and linens were not above his idea of loot. The burglar was a skillfull workman and in no case did he leave enough fingerprints to be of value, perhaps one print would be found on one job and another on the next, but in no case were enough found to identify or classify them. Several of the burglaries were staged in the fashionable Mission Hills district and it was while investigating one of these that Chadwick got his first tip. Residents had seen a man and woman in a small coupe with a dog circling around the vicinity several times on various occasions and had made a mental note of it which they passed along to Chadwick. That night while on foot in the chinatown section he saw a car which closely answered the description given him, and stepping into the street he raised his hand for the driver to stop, but instead he stepped on the gas and sped away. Not being sure that it was actually the car he wanted he hesitated to shoot and was left with only a smell of burnt gas and dust in his mouth for his trouble. Inquiring around among his connections in chinatown, Chadwick learned that such a couple were prospective purchasers for narcotics and had been trying for several days to make a purchase. Putting two and two together he arrived at this total; narcotic addicts—thieves—steal anything they can lay hands on to get the drug.

Now he really had something to work on and he set about an intensive search to locate the car and its occupants. Soon he learned that such a car had been seen in the vicinity of Arizona and University streets, and from a woman whom he located in that vicinity he learned that a couple such as those described had rented a garage from her. The couple had been from there for several days but on the garage door they had left an expensive padlock which had defied the owners attempts to enter. With the woman's permission Chadwick forced open the lock and entered the garage; sure enough inside he found several small articles taken from some of the robberies and a minute quantity of narcotics together with a broken hypodermic needle. His quarry evidently had flown and knowing the limits to which a drug crazed criminal would go under the proper set of circumstances he was now extremely anxious to take them into custody before the spurring whip of narcotics had turned the sly sneak thief and burglar into the cold blooded killer or lustful maniac. Two days elapsed before Chadwick again got a trace of the pair; he learned from a fruit stand on El Cajon Blvd., that such a pair had recently been purchasing large quantities of fruit and candy there and driving away in the direction of La Mesa. This only added to his concern because he knew that the addict while using drugs craves much fruit and candy and therefore the pair must be in possesion of enough drugs to keep them near the peak of that stage where they are most cunning and dangerous. He got very good descriptions from the fruit stand and continued his search out into La Mesa and El Cajon.

In El Cajon while driving around he observed a valuable silver electric fixture of the four drop type, suspended from the porch of a simple inexpensive one room cottage; cautiously he stopped, but no one was at home. He peered through the window and inside he saw many of the large articles reported stolen. Leaving the house he carefully inquired about the neighborhood and learned that the occupants had been gone about a week. He parked his car in a spot not likely to be seen by anyone approaching the house and set up a night and day watch for the return of its occupants. After three days when no one appeared he entered the house and from it removed two large truck loads of stolen property and again the evidences of narcotic users were found. There was a broken needle and a bottle containing yenshee water, a solution of the scrapings from opium pipes, which the addict as a last resort injects to relieve the horrible pangs resulting from the lack of the morphine. Among the small articles were some letters from a prominent Hollywood physician referring frequently to "stuff" which to Chadwick, trained officer that he is, meant only one thing narcotics.

Chadwick went to Holywood and attempted to extract information from the physician about the persons to whom the letters had been written, but it was not until Chadwick announced his identity and revealed possession of the incriminating letter that the physician admitted knowing such persons. He stated that they had gone to Chicago but would return shortly and that he expected to hear from them in a short time. Two days later he notified Chadwick that he had heard from the pair, that they were enroute to California and were in desperate need of their accustomed drugs and that anything might be expected from them before they arrived. Chadwick arranged to have their progress checked at several points on their route and waited to hear from out of state authorities momentarily. With startling suddenness the case came to its dramatic climax a day later. Deprived of their connections for the purchase of drugs, broke and in the depths of despair and crazed by the lack of their accustomed stimulant the pair had rented a cheap cottage in a Texas auto court, had disconnected the hose to the gas heater and with their dog had lain down to await the death which soon came. A wire from the Texas authorities advised Chadwick of the ending of the trail, that red trail of horror, misery and ruin which usually starts with the first dose of narcotics and ends only in despair, disgrace or death.

Next week Mr. Chadwick will tell you about Ernest George Shaffer, the man of many aliasis, gunman and safe cracker extraordinary.

BANKS MONTHLY INDEX SHOW GAINS IN JUNE

Despite factors adverse to industry on the Pacific coast during the last two months, far western business not only held its own but even gained slightly during the month of June, the Bank of America's monthly index shows.

The preliminary index figure for June stood at 65, which was three-tenths of a point ahead of May and an increase of 7.6 per cent over June 1933. A decline in June business as compared with May of this year was generally anticipated.

The index, which is based upon carloadings, electric power production and bank debits, is now almost 21 per cent above the depression low of March, 1933. The slight gain of June over May is explicable in part by the influence of heavier carloadings brought about by the tying up of three Coast waterfronts.

Carloadings in California, Nevada, New Mexico and Arizona during June gained about 24 per cent over the corresponding month a year ago, and for the first six months of this year, the gain was 32 per cent on the basis of the 1933 comparison. Out of 24 major industries reporting, 19 forecast an increase in their freight car requirements for the third quarter of 1934 over 1933.

About 24.8 per cent more employes were on California industrial payrolls during June than in the same month a year ago. Total amount of weekly payrolls was 24.6 per cent higher than in June 1933.

Building activity in eight far western cities fell below 1933 levels during the first half of this year but business activity as reflected by bank debits in 27 cities last month gained 10 per cent over June of last year.

The general level of prices by farmers in California for 24 basic products during June was 92.3 per cent of the July 1910–June 1915 level, the highest point since December 1930.

SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife names Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. Nate tells Lorry he and Owen, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do. Babson makes legal application for the allocation of flood waters to the Forlorn Valley irrigation district. With money advanced by Nate, Lorry clears up her indebtedness to Babson. Nate finds he is falling in love with Lorry. Babson discovers Nate is behind a rival power project. Nate tells Lorry he loves her. She admits she loves Nate, and they become engaged.

"He was ready for me, but he didn't pull. And when Rookby picked himself up Owen said. 'That's right, Henry. This is the closed season in Eden Valley'—and he gave Henry Rookby the great-grandfather of all the kicks under the coat-tail, and walked away from me."

"Poor Owen."

"So I'll make a wholesale job of cleaning out that rat's nest in the Bank of Valley Center, if I can. And after I've smashed the bank I'll buy the wreck, saving the depositors, and have myself elected president."

"You've got to promise something else before I'll marry you, Nate. Help me with the branding—you're a top hand and I can use you—but as soon as the branding's finished go away and complete your business and come back to me as soon as you can."

"I promise. But let me give you a small warning. Don't crowd me with too many demands for promises."

"The only promise I'll ever exact from you again, Nate Tichenor, will be to love, honor, and cherish me until death do us part."

"And endow you with all my worldly goods—including the Eden Valley water, I suppose. Funny sweetheart! I'll race you back to the house for a dollar."

"You'd win. That horse you're riding can step."

"Make it a kiss then."

"Well, you'd still win, so I might as well pay the bet here and now." And she did.

CHAPTER IX

Joe Brainerd, editor of the Valley Center Register, had been summoned to the Bank of Valley Center. Babson led him into his private office. And then, for the last time, he disclosed his plan for the organization of the Forlorn Valley Irrigation district.

"Here's the copy for a full-page ad," he finished. "It's a call for a mass meeting of the citizens, to be held next Saturday afternoon in the plaza, for the purpose of discussing the water situation and the appointment of a committee to investigate the possibilities of leading surface irrigation into the valley. I'll plant the idea good and strong in their minds at that mass meeting, but in the meantime you get out a good rousing editorial that will give them something to think about. Warn 'em that this Mountain Valley Power company is about to grab the water for power purposes. Tell 'em Nate Tichenor's the Mountain Valley Power company. Give Tichenor h—l in a quiet way, but be firm. If we tackle Tichenor now the chances are we can euchre his company out of a contract to sell water to Forlorn Valley. Get the idea? He told me his company wouldn't consider selling us water and why. If we threaten his source of water supply, chances are he'll change his mind and do business with us. And that's what we're after."

Brainerd, remembering his recent experience with Tichenor, needed no urging to enlist in Babson's cause. Within two hours he was back in Babson's office with a copy of his editorial. "That's certainly a rousing editorial," Babson complimented him, "but there'd be a lot more punch to it if you tied into Nate Tichenor more vigorously."

"Why, Tichenor hasn't done anything out of the way, has he?"

"He's swiped our water, hasn't he—or he's trying to swipe it?"

"He's perfectly within his rights, Mr. Babson. How did he know we wanted the water?"

"The rights of the people are paramount to those of the individual, but whether they are or not, it suits me to have you tie into this fellow. Attack him. Impute things to him. Run a history of his family and the Kershaws—continued from week to week. I want to incite the community against him. This is a war we're about to engage in, Joe and in war you've got to make people hate or they won't fight well. We'll have to fight for the Eden Valley water, but we can win, although to do so we may have to buy both the Circle K and the Bar H in order to acquire their water rights. But if we tackle the owners now—hold them up to obloquy and ridicule and public hate, they just can't live in this country, understand, and they'll be glad to sell and get out."

Brainerd replied: "Mr. Babson, it's a job I don't like—for two reasons. One—business; the other—ethical."

"Bear in mind, Joe, that the continued prosperity of Forlorn Valley is a matter of profound interest to you and me."

"I'm on the horns of a dilemma, Mr. Babson. If I attack Tichenor in the manner you suggest he will start an opposition newspaper in this town and ruin me."

"How can he? He can't get any local advertising. I'd see to that, even if the local people were fools enough to support their natural enemy by giving him advertising."

"But he promised me he'd do it, Mr. Babson."

"A mere bluff."

"I think you've got that man wrong. I sized him up as one who will go through. I understand none of his people have ever made a promise they didn't keep. Bad as they were and bad as the Kershaws were, both clans had the courage of wounded grizzly bears. I'm afraid of him."

Babson smiled patiently. "The Hensleys and the Kershaws never had their courage tested outside Eden Valley, Joe. Let Tichenor come projecting around Forlorn Valley and he'll find a man to call his bluff."

"I tell you, Mr. Babson, it's a job I do not want. Tichenor will fight back—and the only way a man can fight the only newspaper that's attacking him is to start an opposition newspaper and mail his copies gratis to his enemies. And I tell you further I dislike the fight because it's dirty. I'll fight Tichenor all over the lot for the sake of Forlorn Valley and its crying needs; but I'll fight him on the issue involved and not his family history."

"I see," Babson murmured sadly, "you're an idealist, too."

"I hope I haven't lost all my idealism."

"I see. Well, Joe, I hate to remind you of it, but you owe this bank three thousand dollars and the bank holds a chattel mortgage on your plant. And you haven't got the building you're housed in paid for yet. I hold a deed of trust on that."

"Is that a threat, Mr. Babson?"

"Suppose we call it a gentle hint, Joe."

"Then let's quit arguing. I'll not wage a mean, dirty, personal war against Nathan Tichenor and that Kershaw girl. That's final—and I suggest that if and when you get surface irrigation into Forlorn Valley, you go out to the main canal, jump in and drown yourself."

"Well, that fixes your clock Brainerd." Babson commenced to rearrange his pens and pencils on their rack and to shuffle the unanswered correspondence on his desk. "I'll just take over the Valley Center Register and put in a man who's loyal."

Joe Brainerd stood up. He was a small man, but like most small men he lacked neither courage nor conceit. He struck, silently and savagely—furious blows, left and right, to Babson's sneering face; as the banker sprawled back of his desk the quondam proprietor of Valley Center's lone palladium of liberty walked out of the bank and back to his office, where he seized a pad of copy paper and wrote:

"With this issue the present editor of the Valley Center Register sings his swan song. Because he wouldn't take orders from Silas Babson and do the latter's dirty work, the Bank of Valley Center, which holds a chattel mortgage on the Register's plant, but not on the editor's soul, will kick ye sole editor and proprietor out into the geometrical center of Valley Center boulevard and put in an editor who will lick the hand that feeds him, even if he doesn't relish the dirty diet.

"The editor desires to express his gratitude to the citizens of Forlorn Valley who have so loyally supported him and his policies. Of course we have found it expedient at times to tread on somebody's toes, but we haven't held mean little grudges, and when the fight was over we were always willing to shake hands. And we have not always won. Hence, we hope to be forgiven our trespasses as we forgive those who have trespassed against us.

"The editor, eventually, may be forced to buy himself a tin bill and compete with the birds for a livelihood, but never let it be said of him that he existed at the price of another's shame and humiliation. In order that ruthless and powerful interests might feed a personal grouch.

"Joseph P. Brainerd,
"Sole Editor and Proprietor,
"Pro Tem,
"Valley Center Register."

When Tichenor and Lorry Kershaw came in for luncheon the next noon, following a hard morning's work in the branding corral, Editor Brainerd's swan song and rousing editorial promptly came to their attention. Indeed, there was no escaping either, for the editorial in black brevier type filled the first two columns on the front page and in the center of the same page, boxed and also in brevier, the swan song appeared.

Lorry read the articles first and, without comment, handed the paper to Nate. When he had finished reading it he looked up at her whimsically. "How stupid that fellow Babson is," he commented. "He's hog-wild with power. One could cash every bet that when there's something constructive to be done Babson will choose the wrong way of doing it. Hurrah for Joe Brainerd!"

"It takes a man to accept ruin rather than orders that conflict with his sense of justice. I wonder what sort of dirty work Babson wanted him to do."

"I don't know. I can't even suspect, but I'm willing to agree with Brainerd, on suspicion, that the work was dirty." He commenced to chuckle with a certain joyous malevolence. "Well, sweetheart, in line with my policy of becoming the big man of this district and also in line with my promise to tease the animal, I believe it's up to me to save the sole editor and proprietor pro tem of the Valley Center Register."

About two o'clock that afternoon Nate walked in on Joe Brainerd and solemnly proffered that suffering individual his hand. "Where can we talk privately?" he asked.

Brainerd indicated his den. Tichenor sat in at the desk, where he filled in a check to Joseph P. Brainerd and signed it. "You fill in the figures," he said, "and my bank will pay the check."

Brainerd stared at him. "What do I have to do for this?"

"Just continue to fight for the best interests of Forlorn Valley."

"Wait a minute, Tichenor. Who told you that you were the man I was ordered to attack?"

"Why, nobody told me. I didn't even suspect it. I decided to get behind you merely after my own heart."

"Sit down," Brainerd commanded. And he related to Tichenor every detail of his conversation with Babson.

"I could stand up under that insect's teasings, Brainerd," Tichenor told him when the tale was done, "but I shouldn't like to see Miss Kershaw put to that extremity. Well, you can give me your note if you care to, or you may consider this advance as a donation to the cause of good men and true. But I have a request to make of you. The Valley Center Register is the mouthpiece and the champion of Forlorn Valley and I desire that it continue to be just that. The war for the water is on and it's going to be some war. I ask you, therefore, to print the news from the front honestly and impartially. It may be that from time to time Miss Kershaw and I—and the Mountain Valley Power company, which is me—will have something to say to your subscribers. I'll expect you to print it—and I don't care two hoots in a hollow how you ridicule or condemn it in your editorial column. That's your privilege."

"There must be something wrong with your head," Brainerd protested, "but whatever the trouble is, I like it. However before I fill in this check—and you'll take my gratitude for granted—it is my duty to inform you that from this day forward the Valley Center Register is going to operate in red ink. I mean that I can never hope to repay this loan from the profits of a losing enterprise."

"Just make certain you can draw a living out of it, and if you can't, see me."

"I owe the bank three thousand, and there's a deed of trust on this building for fifteen hundred. I'd like to pay that all up and have a balance for operating capital. But there's one more point you've overlooked. When I bank this check in Babson's bank everybody will know you're back of me and it will be said that you control me editorially."

"Well, that will be fine. It will automatically prevent you from showing me any editorial preferment."

"You be mighty careful somebody doesn't kill you off in the shank of your callow youth, my friend. You're a temptation. With you out of the way there wouldn't be any water war, because the Kershaw girl couldn't put up a winning fight. Do you realize that?"

"Who'd have that much enterprise?"

"Babson might instigate it." Joe Brainerd was very earnest now. "That man's private fortune and the future of his bank hinges on the future of Forlorn Valley, and I don't think he would give an icicle in Iceland for a human life if it stood between him and his desires. The battle for water in this state is as old as the state and it is unending. There is more drama and more tragedy in it than most people realize; enough men have died with their boots on beside a stream to fill my obituary column for the next ten years. Needs must when the devil drives, Nate Tichenor, and the devil is up on the front seat driving through Forlorn Valley and Silas Babson was the first man to recognize him. Now he'll point him out to the others and the job of exorcizing him will commence at the mass meeting in the plaza next Saturday afternoon."

"I shall attend that mass meeting, and I shall address it."

"Provided you're permitted. Babson will call it to order and address it first, and when he finishes you'll have a hostile audience on your hands."

"They'll listen to me. I'm going to make them a proposition they've got to listen to. I've about made up my mind not to install the power station, but build my dam good and high and store water for sale to Forlorn Valley. I'm not going to stand selfishly by and see those old settlers leaving their abandoned farms. But I'm going to smash that blood-sucker Babson, by smashing his bank."

"How?"

"By starting a new bank here. In return for the lifegiving water I shall have to sell them, the people will have to do business at my bank. I'll rent money at six per cent. I'll take up every loan they have with the Bank of Valley Center, and when they switch their deposits to my bank Babson will be left with insufficient capital to meet the withdrawals."

"How about the minority stockholders? They're rather decent, substantial citizens."

"When the smoke clears away I'll settle with them privately so they'll not lose a dollar."

"You may not be able to secure a state charter for your bank."

"Then I'll operate a national bank."

Tests Made at Biological Station Prove Fish Will Respond to Sounds

At the Plymouth biological station, writes E. G. Bonleuger, director Zoological society's aquarium, in the London Sunday Observer, efforts were made some years ago to ascertain whether fish could be trained to associate the notes of an electric buzzer with the depositing of food in one particular place. The "dining room" in this instance was a large box, and after a few trials with the buzzer, one particular cod so closely and accurately connected the box with food—whether the buzzer was working or not—that it took up permanent residence there.

In public aquaria the visitor is sometimes impressed by the sudden activity shown by the exhibitors when an attendant stationed in the public corridor blows a whistle or sounds a gong just before the tank inmates are fed.

The visitor, however, forgets that the fish have a very keen eyesight and that the appearance of an attendant in the service gallery, invisible, of course, to the onlooker, acts as a very potent appetizer and causes the lively demonstration. The association of food with a whistle or gong is a very effective illusion—but an illusion all the same.

The late Professor Bateman concluded from certain experiments conducted at a research station that most fishes were deaf and took no notice of even a loud report or the shock of an explosion. G. H. Parker in America and Bigelow and Zennick in Germany, came, however, to different conclusions.

These experimenters became satisfied that certain fish showed evidence of the perception of sound. They found that some responded to the notes produced by a tuning fork.

BLIND DATES

DEAR Mrs. Post: Will you tell me whether I was prudish in my point of view and whether you think I am just missing a lot of good times, which could otherwise be mine. This is what happened: A short while ago, before college reopened, my college roommate was going out with her boy friend to an evening cabaret. We both live in Chicago. Her mother did not want her to go to a late dance with the boy alone. So she asked me to go with them and they had a blind date for me, with a friend of his. He was not especially interesting and only a fair dancer but we had a pleasant evening. I wouldn't care if I never saw him again—but then, too, I would just as soon go out with him again if there was no one else who offered. A few evenings ago this boy called up and said he had a friend from St. Paul, a young business man who was the finest kind of man and coming to Chicago for two days, and that he had made a "blind" date for me with the St. Paul man to take me out for dinner and go to dance afterwards. He himself couldn't go out with us because he is on the football squad. He said the St. Paul man would call for me at seven o'clock and that I would have a wonderful time.

I don't know why I behaved as I did. I could not help it. I told him that having my time engaged for me to go out with a total stranger was not my idea of a wonderful time, and that nothing would induce me to make that kind of a blind date, and that I was not a taxi dancer, and then I hung up.

Now, of course, everything is all wrong. We are back in college, my roommate will hardly speak to me because her boy friend is angry because I was rude to his friend. Finally, my roommate said she would leave it to you to decide who was right and who was wrong.

Answer: It seems to me that you were right. It was entirely proper to go out with your roommate and her friend and whoever they might have invited to make a fourth. But to have gone out with the St. Paul man, as coolly arranged for you by a practical stranger, or in fact to go out alone with any man you did not know—unless under very extenuating circumstances—would have been extremely cheap. At the same time you may have been rude in the way you refused to be a taxi dancer. This depends on whether your voice was amiably casual, or angry. So you see?

NAMES

DEAR Mrs. Post: I was named for my father, who died when I was very young. For more than twenty-five years I have continued to use John Smith, Jr., as my name. I know that I am John Smith and should write my name without junior suffixed to it. But my father achieved some prominence and I hesitate to take his name even now. Please write your opinion of my case.

Answer: I think you yourself have given the only opinion there is to give. Actually you are now John Smith, but I have no idea whether the laws of your own state would compel you to sign your name or engrave your visiting cards or even to change your bank signature. I do happen to know of a number of men who for one reason or another continued to call themselves junior long after the death of their fathers. I also know of others, who, during their fathers' lives, have taken off the name junior by adding middle names. Apparently a man considers his name is his own to do with as he likes. But whether he has the legal right to make these changes, I don't know.

Dear Mrs. Post: Should an unmarried woman register in a hotel as Carol Jones or Miss Carol Jones? If miss is included, is it written as an undivided part of her name?

Answer: She writes Miss Carol Jones exactly as in addressing an envelope. She puts miss in parenthesis in front of her signature at the end of a letter to a stranger who does not know whether she is Miss or Mrs., or in your particular case, Mr.

My dear Mrs. Post: What should the young children at our school be taught to call a handy man whose duties also include driving the bus which brings them to and takes them from school every day? He is not a young man and we don't want them to be disrespectful to him, and yet don't know whether we should expect the children to say "Mr. Jones" or not?

Answer: I think it depends upon what you call him. If he is Silas to you, the chances are the children will call him Silas, too. You can, of course, make a point of it and tell them that it is polite to call him Mr. because of his age.

New Meter Shows Just How to Set Carburetor

No longer need the carburetor of your automobile be a mystery, says the Scientific American. A newly perfected meter will promptly tell you exactly how to adjust the needle valve to give the most efficient "mixture."

More accurate than the most experienced repair man, this air-fuel meter registers with scientific exactness just how much too rich or too lean the carburetor mixture is. Of course, the average automobile owner will hardly have sufficient use for such an instrument to bother about it, but operators of fleets of trucks are already finding that exact adjustment of carburetors of their motors gives them appreciable savings in their large fuel bills.

The new meter, developed in Newark, N. J., is operated by passing a portion of the exhaust gas through the meter after the motor has warmed up. When this exhaust gas reaches the analysis cell of the instrument, a pointer is deflected over a wide scale to indicate the exact nature of the mixture.

The meter operates on the Wheatstone bridge principal, comparing the thermal conductivity of the exhaust gas and the air-fuel ratio of the carburetor. The scale of the meter is calibrated directly in pounds of air per pounds of gasoline burned.

Germany's Economic Crisis Now Worries the Nazi Government—NRA Seems Due for Modification—Plot to Kill Caffery Foiled.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

© by Western Newspaper Union.

RECOVERING from the terror and dismay caused by Hitler's "purging" of the Nazi party at a cost of some fifty lives, the people of Germany now realize that a serious economic crisis for their country is at hand. The essence of the Nazi new deal is that to make money is no credit to the individual, but that to work is a great honor. Incentive in the form of profit is vanishing; jobs, many of them created, have been spread out thinly; employers are urged to run their plants at their own expense, to take on more men and to increase wages under the theory that it is a privilege thus to serve the state. Observers believe the Nazi government is now trying to retreat from virtual Communism, which its leaders profess to hate, toward relative economic liberalism. The appointment of Dr. Kurt Schmitt, minister of economics, to the position of economic dictator is taken as evidence of this trend. Schmitt has been given blanket powers that will extend to October 1, and in that time he has the authority to promulgate any reasonable laws that he thinks will help trade and commerce. He also has the right to impose fines on those who do not obey his dictates.

Kurt Schmitt

Chancellor Hitler sought to restore quiet in the reich by ordering a political truce and a call for peace, and he then left Berlin for a vacation in the Bavarian Alps.

There is current among friends of the slain Nazi "traitors" an explanation to the effect that those men were truly the supporters of Hitler and were only preparing and arming selected troops to back him up in an attack on the reactionaries. The sponsors for this account blame General Goering for misleading Hitler and engineering the executions.

One of the chancellor's firmest friends, Rudolph Hess, minister without portfolio, broke out with a speech in which he appealed to France to help Germany avert another war, addressing himself to the veterans. Then he delivered a stern warning to France—and the world—not to try to invade the reich. "Just you dare to attack us! Just you dare to march into Germany!"

European diplomats were considerably disturbed by Hess' utterances, looking on them as the strongest provocation hurled at France in years. The Nazi charge that the executed Storm Troop leaders had been conspiring with France already had made the French angry, and Andre Francois-Poncet, French ambassador to Berlin, protested vigorously against it.

HIS position greatly strengthened by events in Germany, Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss of Austria reorganized his cabinet and declared unrelenting warfare on the Nazis in his country. He got rid of three ministers who were not working well with him and himself took the portfolios of public safety, defense, foreign affairs and agriculture. Maj. Emil Fey was supplanted as vice chancellor by Prince Von Starhemberg and was given the job of repressing all anti-government political activities. Probably to register his disapproval of Hitler's methods, especially as they affect Catholics, Dollfuss recalled Stephen Tauschnitz, minister to Germany, and made him undersecretary of foreign affairs.

Chancellor Dollfuss

The opponents of Dollfuss have been resorting freely to the throwing of bombs, especially in Vienna, and the chancellor in his official communique said his patience was ended and that all political opposition to him must cease. The immediate reply to this was the throwing of a lot more bombs.

LOUIS BARTHOU, French foreign minister, went over to London to ask a lot of things of the British government, but wise observers did not believe he would get much satisfaction. The chief thing he wanted was assurance that Great Britain line up with France again in case of a war with Germany. Reports that Barthou would propose such an alliance reached London ahead of the minister and aroused loud opposition in parliament and the press. There were indications that the cabinet was very cool toward the suggestion

DR. SVEN HEDIN, famous Swedish explorer, has been captured for the second time by Gen. Ma Chung and his "army" of bandits in eastern Turkestan. Taken with Hedin were a dozen or so of his companions. The captives were reported to have been imprisoned in an inaccessible camp in the neighborhood of Aksu, and officials of the Chinese government said that their rescue would be exceedingly difficult. Hedin was engaged in laying out a new trade route across China, following the ancient silk caravan route. Last March General Ma captured him and held him for three weeks.

"ASSISTANT PRESIDENT" is what they now call Donald Richberg, because he is at the head of a kind of super-cabinet which holds power during the absence of President Roosevelt. The counsel for the NRA has his work cut out for him, and has gone at it with a will. The chief part of his task is acting as director of an industrial emergency committee which has been given sweeping supervisory and co-ordinating powers over the major agencies of the New Deal.

Donald Richberg

What is going to happen to the NRA is an absorbing question to many of our best minds. General Johnson has recommended the creation of an entirely new body to take its place and to perform the functions of the federal trade commission in preventing monopoly. In this he recognizes as just some of the complaints uttered by Senator Borah. The plan was submitted to Mr. Roosevelt before he went to sea, and is being studied by Richberg and others.

The administrator, meanwhile, is undertaking to complete the regimentation of industry. He issued an order directing all industries still uncodified either to sign specific codes or to submit to a new "basic code" governing wages and hours. A time limit of 30 days was set, and three of the general's aides were named to supervise this operation.

Senator James Hamilton Lewis of Illinois, in his capacity of chairman of the Democratic senatorial campaign committee, replied to the charge that the New Deal fosters monopoly by asserting that the administration intends to prosecute the monopolists.

"At the demand of large business, stimulated by the national chamber of commerce," said Senator Lewis, "congress by the votes of both parties suspended the trust act to allow all business to economize by consolidation to 'save expense' and provide 'larger development.' Result: Instead of keeping faith with the government, certain manufacturing and financial establishments, conscious that the trust law was suspended, promptly violated the codes of the NRA by joining with each other to fix the price of everything—even as against the government itself.

"This administration has just been able to discover the responsible parties to this conspiracy. It has not had time to take steps to punish it. It will proceed at once both to punish and obstruct further injustice."

In another statement Senator Lewis indicated the President is willing to modify the NRA and perhaps some other New Deal policies.

"What the President wishes, in addition to the reorganization intrusted to Mr. Richberg and his associates, is that there shall be gathered from the public, wherever possible, whatever objections exist as to legislation lately passed," Senator Lewis declared. "He desires particularly to know where business feels that the legislation is inappropriate to its welfare or where some change in the legislation would best serve the general uses of legitimate business in the promotion of general prosperity in all branches of commerce and industry."

BEING ambassador to Cuba is no snap. The authorities of the island republic have just uncovered an extensive plot to assassinate Ambassador Jefferson Caffery with bombs, many of which were found. Something like seventy-five former army officers were arrested and it was said documentary proof of the plot was seized. The officials also found large stores of guns and munitions in warehouses.

Jefferson Caffery

Jose Pedraza, chief of the Havana police, said the former officers were aided by one faction of the ABC political society, which recently withdrew its support from the Mendieta government, and planned a revolt in Havana, striking at police stations and army barracks simultaneously in a night attack after cutting electric lights off over the city.

There were persistent reports in Havana that President Mendieta would resign in favor of Col. Fulgencio Batista, head of the army.

THROUGH four counties of southern Illinois a tornado swept, and Jacksonville was especially hard hit. Scores of persons were injured and the property damage was estimated at a million dollars. Hundreds of the big old oaks, elms and cottonwoods that have been the glory of the city for many years, were destroyed.

WHEAT production in the United States this year will be the lowest since 1896, according to the government report. For the second year since 1890 the yield will fall below domestic consumption.

The government's figures, which completely upset calculations of the grain trade, indicated the aggregate of the country's five leading grain crops will fall 450,000,000 bushels short of last year's production and 1,588,000,000 bushels below the yearly average for the period from 1927-31.

The government estimated the total wheat crop at 484,000,000 bushels, which is 16,000,000 bushels below the forecast it made a month ago.

Even more sensational than the report on wheat was the government prediction of a corn crop of 2,113,000,000 bushels. Private authorities had predicted a crop of 2,334,000,000 bushels, and it was believed that the government's figure would show little change. The corn crop has been counted on to make up the known deficiencies in other feed crops. Last year the corn crop totaled 2,330,000,000 bushels and in the five years from 1927 to 1931 the country produced an average of 2,516,000,000 bushels a year.

THE world civil service commission of the Methodist Episcopal church, in session at Evanston, Ill., voted to participate in the campaign against dirty moving pictures that originated largely in the Legion of Decency organized within the Catholic church.

This campaign is having its effect on the movie industry and the makers of film pictures have been deeply disturbed. Joseph I. Breen of Will Hays' office has been made virtual dictator of pictures in so far as their decency is concerned. Ten of the largest concerns making movies have agreed to "grant to exhibitors the right to omit the exhibition of any motion picture released prior to July 15, 1934, against which there is a genuine protest on moral grounds." This is a big modification of the "block booking" system that has prevailed, and at Hays' office in Hollywood it was said that it will cost the producers around ten millions of dollars.

IT MAY be that William P. McCracken, Jr., will not have to serve the ten days in jail to which the senate sentenced him. The District of Columbia Court of Appeals, by a 3 to 2 vote, decided the senate had not the jurisdiction to inflict such punishment. The case will be carried up to the Supreme Court.

McCracken was tried by the senate for contempt because he refused to give the airmail committee copies of correspondence with his clients. He claimed that as a lawyer he could not produce the documents without permission from his clients.

THOUSANDS of applicants for PWA funds are sure to be disappointed, according to Secretary Ickes, who says nearly all that administration's money has been allocated or earmarked. President Roosevelt recently turned over to PWA about $400,000,000 of the maximum of $500,000,000 which congress authorized him to allocate for public works.

Ickes said the other $100,000,000 might be handed over to the PWA later, but that "we are proceeding on the theory that we will have $400,000,000 to spend" in addition to the original $3,300,000,000 appropriation disposed of long ago.

FOR the first time in history a newspaper office has been picketed by editorial workers. This was done by leaders of the American and New York newspaper guilds to the Long Island Press, published in Jamaica, L. I. The Press says it "operates all its mechanical departments on a union basis and exceeds the requirements of the NRA in every department." But Heywood Broun and his colleagues aver it opposes the organization of editorial workers and has violated the collective bargaining provision of the NRA. Therefore they are asking that the government prosecute the Press.

COMMUNIST agitators who fostered a farm strike in New Jersey didn't get far. The government conciliator stepped in and, finding most of the trouble was due to the efforts of the reds, soon made arrangements for the men to go back to work on terms that did not differ from those formerly prevailing. The Communists are playing a big part in at least ten of the major strikes now in effect.

WITH its eyes on the coming congressional campaign, the G. O. P. elephant is sitting up and taking notice. In other words, the Republican party is showing signs of a distant revivification. Its national leaders are busy these days. The party's eightieth birthday was celebrated at Jackson, Mich., with many speeches and assurances of future victories, National Chairman Fletcher being in the van of the assurers. Mr. Fletcher then went to Chicago, where many of the most important men in the party met with him in closed conferences.

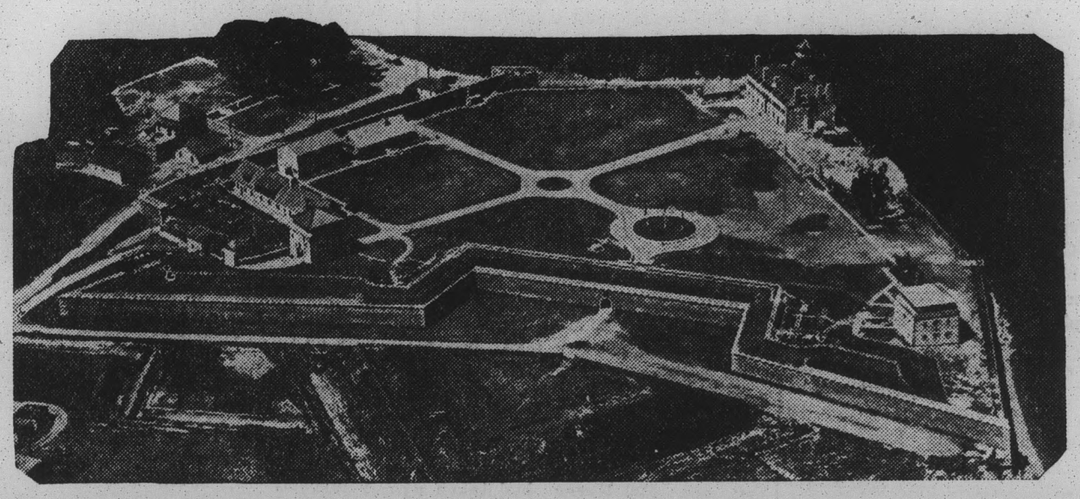
PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT made brief but pleasant visits to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands, inspecting government projects and talking reassuringly to the inhabitants. Then the cruiser Houston headed for Cartagena, Colombia, for a short stop before going to the Canal Zone.

At Colon practically the entire population was out to see Mr. Roosevelt, and he was cheered all the way through the canal to Balboa. There he landed and motored to Panama City where he was the guest of President Arias at dinner and delivered an address. Returning to the Houston, the President began the 12-days journey across the Pacific to Honolulu.

Studying Washing Effect of Unbuilt Dam

Thomas of the Carnegie Institute of Technology using a one-eightieth scale model of the projected Tygart River dam, key project in the Pittsburgh flood control plan for the Monongahela and Ohio rivers, for an exhaustive study of the washing effect of the rushing waters. The dam will be part of a flood control plan to cost about $12,000,000 which is already under way in the hands of United States army engineers.

Historic Old Fort Niagara Has Been Restored



Governmental, military and ecclesiastical personages from both sides of the Atlantic are to participate in a dramatic commemoration of two centuries of heroic warfare and more than a century of perfect peace during the four-day "Three-Nation celebration," financed by the federal, state and Niagara Falls municipal governments, which is to be held at Niagara Falls and at nearby Old Fort Niagara September 3 to 6. Dedication of Old Fort Niagara, completely restored to its Seventeenth century picturesqueness after seven years' labor and at a cost of $500,000, and the unveiling upon its lake-front redoubt of a memorial to the Rush-Bagot treaty, under which the American-Canadian frontier has remained unfortified for 116 years, will supply the occasion's contrasting motifs of war and peace. An air view of the old fort is shown above.

Rockefeller Scion and His Fiancee

Mr. and Mrs. John French of New York and Greenwich, Conn., have made formal announcement of the engagement of their daughter, Mary French, to Laurance Spelman Rockefeller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. SYNOPSIS

At the close of the Mexican war, Robin Kershaw, with his bride, rode into northeastern California. Here he found an ideal valley for cattle raising. They christened it Eden Valley. Below Eden Valley is a less valuable tract which Kershaw's wife names Forlorn Valley. Joel Hensley settles in the lower half of the valley. There is bad blood over fences and water. Kershaw kills Hensley and the blood-feud is on. By 1917, Rance Kershaw, his son Owen, and daughter Lorry are all that remains of one clan. Nate Tichenor is the sole survivor on the Hensley side. He goes to help Lorry in her car and finds her father has died of heart disease. Silas Babson, banker, schemes to control the irrigation and hydro-electric possibilities of Eden Valley. Nate tells Lorry he and Owen, Lorry's brother, met in France just before Owen was killed, and Nate promised that if he survived Owen he would look after Lorry as a brother might do. Babson makes legal application for the allocation of flood waters to the Forlorn Valley irrigation district. With money advanced by Nate, Lorry clears up her indebtedness to Babson. Nate finds he is falling in love with Lorry. Babson discovers Nate is behind a rival power project. Nate tells Lorry he loves her. She admits she loves Nate, and they become engaged. Babson orders Joe Brainerd, editor of the local paper, to attack Nate as an enemy of the people. This Brainerd refuses to do. Nate comes to Brainerd's rescue financially. The editor celebrates by punching Babson's head.

"Well," Joe Brainerd answered slowly, "I'm certainly glad you're my friend and not my enemy. Do you want me to spread the glad tidings of your contemplated philanthropy to Forlorn Valley?"

"No, keep that news bottled up. I want to have the people meet me with all the acclaim a Roman mob was wont to accord the entrance of the Christian martyrs in the Coliseum. I want Babson to lead them on to make fools of themselves, so I can show him up later for a false leader."

"Almost everybody here calls the other fellow by his first name. My name's Joe. May I call you Nate?" he said."

"The pleasure is mutual, Joe. You may."

They shook hands. And then Joe Brainerd glanced at the clock. "Excuse me, Nate. It's five minutes of three and I have just time to get to the bank and deposit this manna from Heaven. I'll fill your check in for six thousand"—and he did.

Babson glared at the editor as the latter came into the bank, but said nothing until Brainerd was about to depart.

"Brainerd, this bank doesn't want your business! Close out your account."

"Thanks for the information. I have just deposited Nate Tichenor's check for six thousand dollars. It's on a San Francisco bank, and as soon as it has gone through clearing I'll give you my check for what I owe the bank and then clean the balance right out. I wouldn't keep tin money in a bank I know is going to bust."

"So you've sold out to Tichenor," Babson jeered.

Little Joe Brainerd's face grew red; he swelled like a turkey gobbler. "You insulted me yesterday and I poked you twice for it," he screamed. "Now you've insulted me again and I'm going to clean up on you." Then he leaped. In reality, he bounded like a tennis ball clearing the railing and landing beside Babson's desk.

"Henry! Help, help," Babson shrilled to his satellite. "Call Bill Rooney," he ordered his stenographer. Then he went down under the impact of Joe Brainerd's furious onslaught, whereupon the editor crawled him and hammered him until his fists hurt him, after which he grasped Babson by the throat and bumped his head against the floor. He was like a desperado of the olden days who, having cleaned out a barroom, could not be happy until he had shot out the lights. He had landed heavily twice on Henry Rookby when the latter interfered, and when Deputy Sheriff Bill Rooney came puffing into the bank in response to the stenographer's summons, Mr. Rookby was crouching in his locked cage, while the demon editor strove to climb over the steel wire netting to get at him.

"Joe, you stop that," Mr. Rooney commanded, grasped the little madman by the seat of the trousers and jerked him down. "Boy, you ain't actin' right."

"You serve Babson's writs of attachment, you fat fool," Brainerd shrieked, and presented Mr. Rooney with a decoration commonly known as a mouse on the eye. Out of his good eye Mr. Rooney observed that his quarry was weeping with rage; so he folded Brainerd to his ample abdomen and carried the lunatic out of the bank, screaming and kicking, and secured him in the local bastile.

"It's war," Brainerd screamed, as Rooney turned the key in the lock. "Babson accused me of selling out. Selling out! Understand? He said I'd sold out! I'm free! I'll print the news, but—you watch my editorials. I'll sizzle like a Roman candle, because I'm free. I'm free, I'm free . . ."

He was stretched out on a bench weeping childishly when Nate Tichenor came over and bailed him out. "The war is on," he sobbed. "The war is on, Nate, and I've fired the first gun."

The power of Silas Babson in Valley Center was very apparent to Nate Tichenor when, having called upon Anson Towle, who combined with harness and saddlery and notary public the duties of local justice of the peace, he was informed that Babson had sworn to a warrant charging Joe Brainerd with assault and battery, malicious mischief and disturbing the peace, and that bail had been set at one thousand dollars in each case.

"Better lower it, judge," Tichenor suggested amiably.

"That feller," his honor replied, "will stay in Bill Rooney's jail until somebody hands me three thousand."

"Orders from headquarters, I suppose, judge."

"You fixin' to get yourself into jail for contempt o' court?"

Nate leaned across Towle's desk. "Yes, I am. And what are you going to do about it, you brainless invertebrate? You're not holding court now, are you? The limit of bail to be set in such cases is five hundred dollars on each charge. Here's fifteen hundred dollars, and you take it and give me an order on Bill Rooney to release Joe Brainerd, or I'll go over to the jail, hog-tie Rooney and take Joe Brainerd out of jail myself."

Probably no man in Forlorn Valley knew less of the law than this village justice of the peace; but he had heard of the Hensley clan and here was the last of that tribe of killers glaring at him so ferociously his Honor trembled. "Well, rather than git into a row with you, young feller, an' have to kill you in self-defense," he decided, "I'll set the bail at the minimum figger. Case comes up for trial at ten o'clock tomorrer mornin'."

"If you're scheming to send Joe Brainerd up for six months without the alternative of a fine I'd advise you to change your mind. And how's that for contempt of court?"

The case was called at ten and at ten-thirty, when Silas Babson, the complaining witness, had not appeared, Nate Tichenor, acting as Brainerd's attorney, rose and moved Anson Towle that the case be dismissed for lack of evidence. "Take my word for it, your Honor, neither Mr. Babson nor any of his witnesses will appear. Mr. Babson has—as I assumed he would—thought it over and decided to let bygones be bygones. The message your Honor carried to him from me yesterday evening was very convincing."

"Fined two dollars for contempt of court. Case dismissed."

"Will the court please state in what manner I have been guilty of contempt."

"You're intimatin' that I carried $1 poked you twice for it, you fat fool, you insulted me yesterday and I'll poke you twice for it, you insulted me again and I'm going to clean up on you."

"Will the court please state in what manner I have been guilty of contempt."

"You're intimatin' that I carried Si Babson a message tellin' him to lay off Joe Brainerd or he'd git himself in trouble."

"You should read up on the law. You can't fine me for contempt alleged to have been conveyed in a mere suspicion on the part of your Honor. I shall not pay the two dollars and what is your Honor going to do about it?"

A guffaw went up from the crowded courtroom, nor could all of Bill Rooney's pounding on a table quiet it. As an officer of the court, i.e. bailiff, Mr. Rooney felt that his own dignity had been more or less assailed by Nate Tichenor when the latter had so adroitly managed to upset that of the court.

"You just wait a minute, Tichenor." Bill Rooney's voice was as honey. "I'll just fan you, young feller, an' see if you're carryin' a concealed weapon. Carryin' a gun without a permit don't go in my jurisdiction."

"I am carrying a gun, Mr. Rooney, so I'll spare you the effort of searching me and produce my gun at least one second before you produce yours."

Bill Rooney went white and then pink; he wet his lips, and his glance flinched from Tichenor's and roved over the courtroom. Then the deputy sheriff had a brilliant idea. "It happens I ain't wearin' my gun this mornin', Tichenor."

Before the words were fairly out of his mouth he was gazing down the barrel of Nate Tichenor's pistol. "Stand up, turn your back on the crowd and lift up your coat-tails," came the ringing order.

Tichenor advanced upon the deputy sheriff, thrust his gun in the official midriff and, with his left hand, unbuckled a belt at Rooney's waist and removed a pistol in a holster. Then he walked up on Judge Towle's dais, broke his own pistol and exhibited a single empty chamber to the gaping crowd.

"An empty pistol is not a more lethal weapon than any other piece of hardware and when worn in a shoulder holster or under the coat-tails, doesn't come under the head of concealed weapons. Here's your gun, windbag"—and returned the wretched Rooney his pistol. "This weapon of mine, which you thought was an army automatic, is the latest model air-pistol. It shoots a tiny pellet that will kill a bird, and I bought it recently to practice pistol shooting by killing blue-jays around my ranch." He turned his back on Rooney. "And now, fellow citizens, you know how brave Mr. Rooney is—in his mind. And you know just what peculiar thoughts occasionally flit through the mind of your justice of the peace. Your local law mill is in bad shape and ought to be reorganized." He moved down the aisle toward the door, and Joe Brainerd followed.

"Nate," said Joe Brainerd. "As one outlaw to the other tell me why you made such pitiful monkeys out of Towle and Rooney?"

"Well, that fool justice of the peace had it coming to him for trying to take up the Babson cudgels against you. I concluded to strike another blow for the editor. As for Bill Rooney,—well, I hold an ancient grudge against Bill. At school I used to carry a gun for Owen Kershaw. The teacher found it out and told the principal, who ordered me to leave it home. I refused, because I thought I couldn't afford to risk obedience in those days; so the principal told Bill Rooney on me. Bill was the night watchman then, so he frisked me, took my gun away from me and gave me a first-class thrashing. I hesitated at making reprisals until I should be older and stronger, when I planned to give Bill a thrashing with his own belt. Today was my first opportunity."

"Your clan had a reputation for cold-blooded courage and ferocity, Nate—and you've revived it. So today you're a hero in Forlorn Valley, but when you organize to deprive this valley of the water from Eden Valley creek you're going to be the most hated man in this county."

"But I'm not going to deprive Forlorn Valley of Eden Valley water. I've assured you of that already."

"Oh yes, you are. You'll have to, if not for your own sake then for the sake of Lorry Kershaw. I'm going to let you in on a secret—now that Babson is my enemy. He plans, after organizing the irrigation district, to tap Eden Valley creek at the head of the Handle, up in the public domain, lead the water west through the public domain and down to a natural reservoir in the hills off to the west; thence into Forlorn Valley."

"But, Joe, it would be silly of Forlorn Valley to tap the stream up in the Pan. I have a splendid dam site and it is to my interest to see the dam erected there. In that way Miss Kershaw and I, with our ranches upstream from that dam, will always be assured of an abundant supply of irrigating water."

"Exactly. But if Forlorn Valley taps the stream above your ranches, Miss Kershaw, you, and the Mountain Valley Power company will be out of luck. Then, too, the reservoir of the Mountain Valley Power company would never have sufficient water to fill it and your company would be deprived of the ability to manufacture power."

"I don't know the law in the premises, Joe, but this is what I plan to do. I'll attend that mass meeting, listen to what is said and, if it appears to be the sense of the meeting that an irrigation district shall be formed and the water supply secured from Eden Valley creek up in the Handle, I'll tell the people to forget all that bother and expense, that I'll put in a dam on the Mountain Valley Power company's property at my own expense, provided they will enter into contract to purchase water from me and provided, of course, that we can come to terms. My plan is economically sound, and I think they'll be glad to entertain it."

"I hope so, Nate, but before you commit yourself in public I suggest that you make certain of your rights. If I were you I'd consult some eminent firm of attorneys whose specialty is water law."

"I shall. I suppose I can find the right lawyers in San Francisco."

The following morning Tichenor was in San Francisco and, acting upon the advice of his attorney, he sought the offices of Messrs. Brooks, Gagan and Brooks. Gagan received him and listened without interruption while Nate outlined the situation.

"I know all about that Eden Valley proposition, Mr. Tichenor," he then announced. "A Mr. Silas Babson, of Valley Center, interviewed me on the subject recently, but he did not retain us. In fact, certain aspects of the advice I gave him appeared to conflict with his own opinion of the situation."

"Well, he's liable to be around later to retain you, although I hope to restrain him by employing peaceable and profitable measures. Meanwhile, I haven't any business for you, save to outline for me the legal rights of Miss Kershaw and the Bar H Land and Cattle company in the premises. I'll pay your fee for that, so please fire away."

"You can win any suit filed against you with the exception of a condemnation suit," Gagan said.

"I was quite certain of that before I called upon you, but merely desired to have an expert verify my suspicions. A non-riparian community—Forlorn Valley—is about to form an irrigation district on the strength of a promise of the state water commission that it will allocate to the proposed district the storm, flood, freshet, or so-called waste waters of Eden Valley creek. Miss Kershaw and I make beneficial use of all of the overflow waters of Eden Valley creek every spring, and no waters are waste waters until after they have flown over our lands. The irrigation district purposes tapping the creek near its source in the public domain and appropriating the flood or waste waters before such waters have flowed over our lands.

Tests Show Women Lead Taking Hints, but Men Found Better at Reasoning

If women do not reason as well as do men they are better at taking hints with the result that they may more nearly approach the achievements of men. This is one conclusion drawn from a series of reasoning tests given 384 students at the University of Michigan by the university psychology department, reported in the British Journal of Psychology.

Using students in the beginning psychology course as subjects, they were divided into two groups, one of which received some general hints on what not to do when solving the problems presented. The second group received no suggestions. The hints were given in connection with one of these problems and it was solved by twice as many individuals as the other problem.

Because the suggestions were in general advice against depending on habitual patterns of thought and blind persistence in attempting to solve problems, and because the tasks were best done when the hints are given, it is concluded from the experiments that the type of reasoner most successful in problem-solving is the one who can suppress or inhibit his habitual line of thought to allow free play of new ideas and thought patterns.

The women students were regularly poorer than the men in problem reasoning, even though all the problems were not of a "mechanical" nature, which might be more favorable to men. Those in the group receiving suggestions, however, raised their solving average markedly, apparently benefiting comparatively more from the hints than did the men in the same group. The men's scores in this group rose decidedly, but the women scored higher.

Clothes That Go Out for Good Time

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

NOW that everybody's taking to biking or roller skating regardless of age, and since all the world seems to be seeking tennis or golf grounds or sunny beaches where to frolic summer hours away, creators of fashion are kept busy thinking up apparel suitable for time, place and the game.

The grand thing about play-togs, whether you are young or old or in the between years, is that in these modern times they are so entirely set free from old-time rules and restrictions. The idea nowadays is that your clothes simply must not be cumbersome. They must permit untrammeled freedom of action and they must be as chic as they are "comfy."

Which explains why the shorts outfits have become so overwhelmingly popular. In this type of costume designers have not left anything undone that should be done to work out the problems down to the minutest detail of "style," plus service and comfort.

The fact that sports clothes are so skillfully designed is not their only lure for there is another element which enters into the scheme of things that lends infinitely to the zest of sportsy attire—the materials employed. Such cottons! Such linens! They are that swagger, that colorful, that altogether intriguing, one can scarcely comprehend that they come under the humble classification of utilitarian washable weaves.

Speaking of the new cotton, there is the new pukker stripe seersucker with its brilliant bands of color alternating with multicolored hair-line stripes, and the new cabana twill which is particularly smart in string color and the candy stripe nubby yarn cotton which, seeing, you will not be able to resist and those spongy rugged herringbone cotton coatings which are so attractive the more so in that they tailor like a woolen and wash like a pocket handkerchief—cotton weaves the likes of which would not have seemed possible in years of yore.

The same is true about the marvelous linens which have come out this season.

No one can say that the shorts ensemble shown to the right in the picture is anything but a winner in the arena of fashion. As to being thoroughly practical this threesome which adds a jacket and an easy-to-take-off-and-on skirt to a shorts outfit is about the best thing that ever happened in the way of a sports costume. This model is made of Irish linen in a thrilling shade of sail red. In her hand the young lady carries a new waterproof beach kit equipped with everything which will serve as first aid to seashore beauty.

The beach shorts to the left in the group is also made of linen of the coveted uncrushable type. It is in natural color and is tailored to a nicety, has the big sailor collar which is so important this season and buttons conveniently at each side.

Just to prove that in the new cottons the new linens have a most dangerous rival in the contest now going on for highest honors, we submit to admiring eyes the goodlooking shorts centered in the group. They are made of a ripple-tex seersucker and as everybody knows there's nothing smarter in the realm of washable weaves than gay seersucker—a perfect answer to summer wardrobe needs—crisp, cool, sturdy, tubable.

BEACH TOGS BUILT ON SAILOR LINES

Half the beach clothes in the country are built along sailor lines, so style dispatches say. But it's in accessories and trims the fad gets into its full swing.

Rope is all over the place. Instead of straps, bathing suits now use woven yarn resembling rope. Separate belts come in the same thing.

Buckles used to be just buckles, but now they're anchors. Rope belts, particularly, are hitched up garnish play suits of the more rough and ready type in the most surprising places, at the back where the straps cross, in the apex of a front V.

Matched Scarf and Glove Sets New Feature Mode

Nowadays it would never do to walk out in a pair of gloves that didn't match anything, in this day of passionate ensembling, when even your shoestrings have to match the color of your tie, or something.

Confronted with the difficulty of matching gloves to hats, as somebody timidly suggested at the beginning of the season, the cagey designers have now hit on the idea of presenting glove and scarf ensembles. And very nice they are, too.

Consider, for instance, the pictorial possibilities of a bow of sheer chiffon milanese under your chin, matched by gloves of the same gosamer fabric. Or of a frilled organdie collar on your best dark sheer frock, with matching organdie cuffed gloves.

Velvet-Ribbon Trimming

Velvet ribbons in lighter or darker colors than the frock, especially in shades of lighter blue on navy, or in bright red or green on white, make an effective trimming.

Plaid Madras Accents

Plaid madras from the West Indies, glass, string, leather and wood are strung together in fascinating array to accent summer playtime clothes for the country.

TOT'S BEACH OUTFIT

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Beach fashions for wee folks show such novel ensembles as this. The deftly pleated shorts are bright blue. The anchor trimming on the little white blouse with the new halter neck, lends no end of fascination to this cunning juvenile costume. The beach hat is a la Chinoise which shows how truly a style-conscious little lady is she who posed for this amusing and most delightful fashion picture. Sun suits for tiny tots are being made of mere scraps of material with a halter neckline and the entire back exposed to the sun's health-giving rays. Their cunning details bring a smile.

A HUNDRED PER CENT LEADER

Man is "kidding" himself with the sanctimonious belief that he is a lofty being of perfection; but if he is anything of the old Adam in scripture, he is treading this earth with the curse of the Almighty upon him. The stream cannot rise above its source. This being true, no born human is capable of attaining a 100 percent standard of living, nor can he function the same in any of his activities.

While the grotesque mind gives way to laughter and wagging of head and comic gesture relative to present-day conditions being a fulfillment of prophecy, there can be no denial of the fact, as the scrupulous reader and observer reads between the lines, that the strife and struggle in all its aspects of crime, extortionate practices as pictured in words in the daily newspapers, must mean a prophetic warning.

It would be one of the greatest miracles of the age if we could produce a 100 percent leader in reforming world affairs, for it will take all just such human power to pull us out of our mess. That there is a revolt against corporate greed, selfish intentions and political tricking in public trust is not denied, and every fight against these evils should have support, but it takes a leadership hitherto unknown to command the battle front. Maybe such a leader will come forth in its own good time.

Henry Ford will be 71 years old next Monday. Such an event is worthy of recognition, for a man who has accomplished what Mr. Ford has in so few years. As an automobile inventor and builder he has done more for humanity, and the man of moderate means, than any person living today. He only had a common school education and worked at his trade as a machinist for a number of years. He soon became recognized as a mechanical engineer when he made his first Ford. For price, economy and utility he got famous almost overnight. The remarkable thing about his science in manufacturing was in the paying of $5.00 per diem wage and advocating profit-sharing. As a strong advocate of world peace, in 1915 he chartered a ship to carry his representatives to Europe to plead with the belligerent nations to end war For one who has massed and spent millions for philanthropy and institutions of public good, no one has done much better than Henry Ford.

No one longs to be living in the east just now. That section of the country is in the thralldom of baking hot weather, such as seldom experienced. With deadly cyclone and tornado. It is worse than an earthquake, for the storms are infrequently occuring, but a quake is less damaging to life and property and very rarely do they come. Here in California we get hot days, but at night we get a cool tonic for a soothing sleep. The same heaven is still over our heads and the same ocean rolls at our feet. Those Eastern winters freeze you five months of the year, and the summers are unbearable from the heat. No wonder the Californian sings, "Sermons in stones, books in running brooks, and good in everything:" It is California life. Lowell tells us that there is no good in arguing with the inevitable. The only argument available with a bleaky back-east wind is to put on your overcoat.

Uncle Sam is going to give the Philippine Islands the right to govern themselves in 1945. Doubtless many reciprocal trade relations will be established, and this country will be a needful advisor on many questions. Above all we hope to see a great reign of peace, such as will elevate the people to a high standard of culture. The Insular Constabulary is in charge of Col. Basilio Valdes, a peace leader who is already calling recruits and over 6000 peace guardians are developing into an army of the Philippines. Many other steps, necessary for the independence of the people, are being taken. World peace should be so far advanced by 1945, that the Island inhabitants will have the desire of many generations granted—a peaceful independence, with the motto "Obedience to Law is Liberty."

There is no doubt but what selfishness and fear is keeping nations apart. We seem more concerned over geographical boundaries and territorial greed than in establishing world-wide peace, but our manhood as well as our statehood is on trial. The world nations have learned that no peace plan will ever work until we remove the wedge of selfishness and fear that keeps us apart. It keeps nations busy watching their neighbors to ascertain what will be the next military move and what there is to be gained. One has said that whatever you dislike in another person take care to correct in yourself. Nations might profit by the same motto. "The love of liberty is the love of others; the love of power is the love of ourselves."

Walt Dinsey, the originator of "Mickey Mouse" on the screen is a California producer, and he has made himself world-wide known by the mighty heart-ache laughs and streaming eyes. His innocent adventures portrayed have won for him the gold medal from the American Art Dealers Association, awarded for its true art in bringing out and making people feel the heart-beat in life and familiar things.

The birthday of George Bernard Shaw, on the 26th of this month, is considered more of an event to the Irish dramatist and critic, than it is ordinarily to the average American citizen. As a literary man he stands high in the art of drama and music; in 1925 it won him the Nobel prize. The abrupt critical remarks of the gentleman are reechoing in the ears of our people ever since his visit here last year.

AL LYONS, POPULAR BAND LEADER IN SAN DIEGO FOR A WEEK

Al Lyons, the most popular band leader, ever to wield a baton on the stage of San Diego theatres, and who holds a record for unbroken performances as the master of ceremonies at any theatre in San Diego county, comes back to his own today. At the head of his own troop of Ambassador hotel radio orchestra and entertainers he has been booked for one solid week's performance at the Orpheum theatre.

Known throughout all of San Diego for the fine music his band presented while playing the premier houses of San Diego, Lyons has gone far up the scale. San Diego is Lyons' home town and he is glad to be back.

For several months Lyons has been playing at the Hotel Ambassador in Los Angeles and his engagement at the Orpheum is a decided scoop for Hartman. The engagement occurs on the eve of Lyons' departure with his band for an extended tour of the east.

Included in the list of entertainers appearing with Lyons and his band will be Carl and Paul Johnson, premier violinists; Herman Fields, billed as the "Little Caruso"; and Neil Castognoli, hot saxophone and clarinet soloist. This group of entertainers will be augmented by Ted Mack and his band with Ted Mack serving as master of ceremonies. With the two groups of musicans, San Diegans can be assured of the greatest musical treat ever shown on one stage in this county.

The screen will present Majestic Pictures new first release special "Murder on the Campus," one of the past few months leading mystery productions. Cast in the starring roles in the thriller are Shirley Grey, Charles Starrett, J. Farrel Macdonald and Ruth Hall.

A Pathe Review, Mickey Mouse cartoon and a Micky McGuire comedy, "The Medicine Man" complete the fine bill of entertainment which is being offered at no advance in prices.

Continuing the policy of presenting an entirely new change of program on Sunday, Hartman has announced that although Al Lyons and his entire group of entertainers will be held over they will offer and entirely new stage show. Included on

Chadwick Lands Safe Opener For Long Term

This is another of the series of articles by Richard W. Chadwick, releasing for publication for the first time the inside story of some of San Diego's most unusual and notorious crimes. Mr. Chadwick is particularly well qualified to relate these incidents because he is the man who was in charge of the investigation and solution of each crime he tells about. His experience in criminology has been wide and varied, his success as an officer is unequaled in this county. He is now a candidate for the office of sheriff and is basing his campaign upon this experience and success. The following case, while unusual in many respects, is but a sample of his days work during the past twenty-five years.

During the months of August and September in 1920, the city and county of San Diego had been visited by an epidemic of safe robberies and burglaries, most of which were performed in about the same manner. The robber would up-end the safe by the use of a lever, and drill through the steel plate and fireclay insulation of the bottom, making a hole large enough to insert what is known in criminal parlance as a "can opener." This device consists of a hardened steel cutter, shaped like the blade of the ordinary household can opener, to which the operator attaches a six foot pry bar by means of bolts, gaining in this manner leverage to cut out the bottom of the safe much like the housewife opens a can. This method had been followed in so many of the cases that the police suspected that they were all the work of the same man. Each safe had been carefully examined for fingerprints and some had been obtained, but not enough to identify or classify. Early in October the Whitney Company safe was robbed, more than $1400.00 being taken. Many suspects were arrested and questioned and diligent search was made for the robber, but at the time this story begins very little headway was being made. On October 3, fate decided to take a hand in the game, a game which shortly was to dangle the lives of three men by a slender thread. It may be called fate, luck, chance or what you will, it remains that these men were spared serious injury or death by a set of circumstances. which although stranger than fiction are absolutely true to the last detail.

A call came to police headquarters that night that a strange man had been seen entering a home near the corner of Front and Laurel streets. Chadwick and two other officers were dispatched to answer the call. When they arrived at the location Chadwick was informed that the man had left the house a moment before and had disappeared between two houses close by. Detailing the two officers with him to make the search, Chadwick called central station for more help, and then in the police automobile, he started circling the block to prevent the suspect from leaving the immediate vicinity before more men arrived. Suddenly he saw a man emerge from the shadows between the two houses run north on Front street and dart down a short flight of stairs towards the rear of a house across the street. The police car came to a skidding stop as Chadwick jerked on the emergency and leaped out in pursuit of the fleeting man. As he ran across the street, Chadwick drew from its holster a brand new thirty-eight special revolver which he had purchased that morning; he reached the top of the steps at full speed and started down; there was a spurt of flame, a sharp report, and a bullet sang by his head; he took a few more steps, there was another flash, a report, and another slug whined past his head even closer than the first, he got a glimpse of his antagonist now, and raised his new revolver, carefully aimed it and pulled the trigger; the only result was a sharp click—it had missed fire. Twice more he aimed and pulled the trigger in desperation while two more slugs from the criminals gun buried themselves with a crash in the wood of the house but scant inches from his head. Then he heard an oath from the man and saw him fumble with his gun, leave his position and start to run out into the open towards the rear door of a nearby house. Chadwick followed him, getting closer at every step, and hoping that the man had not observed the misfire of his new revolver, Chadwick called to him to stop or be shot; but the only answer was continued flight. A light came on in the back room of the house towards which the man was fleeing and a hand from inside started to push open the door just as he reached it. Chadwick again aimed his new revolver at the man and again pulled the trigger; the gun fired, and the bullet threw a shower of splinters and plaster into the faces of two startled men, one the man at whom Chadwick had fired, and the other a prominent attorney who had come to his back door to see the cause of the shooting a moment before and had arrived just in time to meet the fleeing man as he attempted to enter. The attorney and the criminal collided and before his man had time to recover, Chadwick had reached and disarmed him, taking from his hand the automatic gun which had jammed after the fourth shot, and from his pockets a vicious loaded "sap" and a flashlight. In the man's pockets when he was searched were found several rings of keys of the type used by burglars and thieves. He was taken to the jail, booked, mugged and fingerprinted and then subjected to questioning, while the identification bureau compared his prints with the prints and partial prints taken at the scene of many of the uncolved robberies. In a short time they brought in their report to Chadwick. To say that he was pleased is but putting it mildly, for he had captured the notorious Ernest George Shaffer, a man of many aliasis and a desperate criminal whose circular from various penal institutions and law enforcement officers bore the note "Uses gun freely," and the man whose fingerprints appeared.

He had been in penal institutions in California, in Michigan, Indiana and in other states. He was now on parole from California's penitentiary at Folsom and there he was returned on December 13, 1920 to serve out his unexpired term and in addition to pay the penalty for his more recent crimes. His last words to Chadwick as he was taken to the train enroute to Folsom were, "I'll kill you, d— you, when I get out if it's a hundred years from now." It may be just about that long before he is actually a free man, for following his release from Folsom in 1930 he was taken to Walla Walla, Washington, to pay his debt to the society of that state in the amount of from five to fifteen years. When his term there has been completed he must still face the authorities of Indiana and other states and it is calculated that before he has paid his debt in full he will have served sixty-seven years, so even if he keeps his word to kill Chadwick the county of San Diego still has an opportunity to avail themselves of his services as their sheriff for a good many years to come.

The next story by Mr. Chadwick will tell how he solved the slaying of one man and brought his slayers to justice while investigating the slaying of another man.

F. B. ANDREWS SEEKS JOB OF CITY TOWNSHIP JUDGE

Atty. F. B. Andrews, who has announced his candidacy for Township Justice 3, cited his position and qualification for the office as follows:

"The public is always entitled to the utmost courtesy," he said.

"For more than 35 years I have been engaged in the general practice of the law, serving as a district attorney six years and as a city attorney 15 years.

"I was elected a member of a school board for two terms; also served as a member of a city charter commission and have been president of the San Diego County League of Municipalities.

"I have reared a family of five children and have been a resident and taxpayer of San Diego for more than 22 years.

"I will strive, if elected, for a more strict enforcement of the motor vehicle laws against drunk and reckless drivers, so as actually to protect human lives here and end the disgrace of San Diego's having more automobile deaths per capita than any other city in the United States.

"I will also give an economic administration of the office and eliminate useless delays in procedure."

THE THEOSOPHICAL SOCIETY: POINT LOMA

Speaking on the subject "Humanity—My Neighbor" Mrs. Frances Dadd addressed an interested audience in the Temple of Peace last Sunday afternoon. After sketching the evolution of the real man from unself-conscious god spark through his manifold manifestations in earth lives, the speaker said: "Did it ever occur to you that at best we see but a small segment of our neighbor's self, even in the case of those we know best? For the life of each man began millions and millions of years ago—and even then it was not really the beginning, for it had none, but was simply a renewal, a reassembling of aggregates of entities, for the gaining of new and wider experience. How then, without a knowledge of this age-long and limitless background of causes and effects, which Theosophy reveals to us, can we adequately judge our neighbor, when in daily life we see but the merest atomic speck of what he really is? A thoughtful study of Theosophy and a sincere application of it to life engenders generosity of judgement of others. The wider our sympathies, the broader our viewpoints, the more of the hidden good do we see in our neighbor and the more tolerant do we become of his shortcomings. How truly spoke the writer who said: "Our thoughts of others may be said to be the soil in which our own characters, small or great, grow, for no man can cultivate great qualities in himself while he continually notices small ones in others". Interesting questions were presented by members of the audience and received answers from the speaker, Dr. Lydia Ross, Abbott Clark, and George Simpson.

On Sunday, August 5 Emmett Small, jr., will introduce the subject of "The Ladder of Life" in a forum-lecture to commence at 3 o'clock in the Theosophical Temple. All are welcome. Sessions suitable to the summer vacation are held by the Lomaland Lotus circle for those who wish to attend at the same hour.

Subjects for discussion on the new syllabus during the coming Sundays in August are: "Cyclical Opportunities", "The Path of Discipleship," "Seeking the Truth," "What Have the Ancients to Offer?" and "The Secret Doctrine." Questions may be presented on all these and kindred subjects at any of these meetings.

- Former Postmaster.

PRIMARIES
August 28th
(Political Advertisement)
(Paid for by a friend)

The Dort-for-Sheriff-club of Ocean Beach wish to bring to your attention very briefly a record of Ernest Dort's public life.

Mr. Dort was a successful business man having had the agency for several makes of automobiles and built the building now occupied by the San Diego chamber of commerce at that time. He was also secretary of the San Diego Yacht club and finally became commodore of this organization.

Several months before the entry of the United States in the world war Mr. Dort received a commission in the United States Navy, and when war was declared he was placed in command of a patrol beat. He patrolled the coast for a time and then was placed in charge of commissioning and breaking in the new boats as they were being built by the Navy yard. His next commission was to survey the coast from San Diego south stopping at every city and village going up every river as far as his ship could navigate and then proceeding in a small boat having an outboard motor, locating slackers from the U. S. and locating radio stations that were being used in espionage work by the Germans in central and South American waters.

In Managua he was one of the key in a coup which resulted in the complete breaking up and annihilation of the German secret service nest there. These Germans had almost completed their plans for the destroying of the Panama Canal and were working on a bomber to destroy our National Capital.

He was postmaster for the city of San Diego for twelve years and was given the highest praise by the Government inspectors and those with whom he came in contact for his executive ability, honesty, loyalty, and straightforwardness. While serving as postmaster Mr. Dort personally took into custody several nationally known criminals as well as a number of others who were plying their trade in this district, before the arrival of the post office inspectors and the Government Department of Justice agents. Remembering that the duties of the position of the office of sheriff is for the protection of life and property. Through Mr. Dort's knowledge of criminals and his alertness, no attempt was made to burglarize or hold up the San Diego post office during his incumbency.

Mr. Dort holds a commission as a Lieutenant commander in the intelligence division of the United States Navy and is subject to call only in the event of a National emergency.

We believe that Mr. Dort is an ideal candidate for the office of sheriff and we ask you to support him and vote for him in the primaries of August 28. Signed

Rudolph Nagel.

Howe About:

An Affecting Letter Sentiment Our Courts

©, Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

By ED HOWE

I LATELY saw a note sent by a merchant to a patron, which read: "Dear sir: Reference to our books show that you have for some years paid your bills promptly. In our grumbling about patrons who are very slow, or do not pay at all, we feel we should express appreciation of your long-continued fairness." . . . I have not in a long time seen a letter affecting me more agreeably. Should there not be more appreciation for men who come somewhere near doing their duty to themselves, their families and their country?

I often think of the loneliness of my position in religion; I almost never meet a man who agrees with me; one I can sing hymns with, and call brother. As a hypocrite I think I am about the average, but have never seen any sense in exploiting it; I am rather disposed to hide my hypocrisy, and be ashamed of it. I have found it best to be honest with sentiment of all kinds; it is easier than to pretend a lot of things there is no practical warrant for. I judge religion as I judge everything else, and, as I say above, am very lonely.

A rather notable lawyer called on me lately. He visited London a few months ago, and told about a sensational murder case there. The crime was committed after his arrival. He was in and around London not to exceed two or three weeks, and by the time he left the murderer had been arrested, convicted and hanged. An appeal to the highest court had also been made, and considered and decided in due form.

I do not know a reputable lawyer who is not ashamed of our courts. Many of the judges, and all the people are, yet we do nothing about it, as we do nothing about our disgraceful political system, our banking system, or racketeering, kidnaping, or bombing. We shout higher ideals than the people of other nations, and submit to actual performances not existing among the Indians before we Christianized them.

Reasonably respectable people are largely in the majority, but they do not use their power; the mistaken, irresponsible, incapable, vicious, are in control. It is said Russia is ruled by less than 2 per cent of the people. That is about the percentage here. We pretend we are devoted to the Old Flag, our homes, our families. Actually we daily assault and insult all three.

A certain town built a really remarkable court house and city hall. "A beautiful structure," a stranger said to a citizen. "Yes," the citizen replied, "but it busted the town and county. It reminds me of the war: it was a fine gesture, but how it cost! A New York magazine recently made fun of us because of our squirming about the bonds. Before you leave town, you should see some of our school houses. I fear we shall get in trouble over the school house bonds, too."

The better elements among the Russian people knew for hundreds of years before the revolution that their government was bad; not as good as it might have been easily made. Had the best citizens insisted on good government—the greatest good for the greatest number; there is nothing better than this—there would have been no Russian revolution. . . . The present disturbance in the United States is due to the same cause: the better elements have neglected to insist on the best government possible. . . . But the old government in Russia was better than what the radicals are giving the people now—as our old government was better than what the radicals are offering.

In my town there is a woman who was once very tough. She has a daughter, and is stricter with her than any other mother in town. . . . I do not believe stories that parents are responsible for the bad children now so numerous. It is nearer the truth to say that we have all encouraged liberty so much that parents are no longer able to control childreu as they once did.

* * *

I know an old man who is ill, and lately went to see him. He lives in the house of a relative, as there is no other place for him; and he is not very welcome there. He told me his greatest terror is the radio, which is always going. The radio is a quite wonderful invention, and very creditable to the gentlemen who worked out its details, but there is a lot of mischief in it few of our politest people realize.

* * *

One who works under the constant direction of a foreman may get along in a fashion without common sense, but a man who is his own boss (as doctor, lawyer, merchant, chief) must have common sense, or he will drop many monkey wrenches in the delicate machinery he is called upon to handle.

* * *

There is one blessed thing about our problems: We can put them off until tomorrow, next week, next year; and finally we will die, and leave them to others for solution.

Getting Best Out of Picnics

Suitable Clothing Is Perhaps the First Thing to Be Considered; Selection of Refreshments Also Must Be Carefully Planned.

The picnic season is here, and those who delight in life out-of-doors rejoice. In cool days the warmth of sunshine is welcome, and one can bask in it. When days are hot, there is shade from trees in fresh green foliage. And all the time there is that peculiarly delicious fragrance of the air with its flower-scented perfume.

To enjoy the picnic after it is over is of importance as well as during the pleasant hours in the open air. There should be a benefit from it. To insure this, three things are necessary. First — the preparations should not have been too tiring. Often a woman becomes so weary getting ready for the outing, that, in spite of the pleasure, she gets little or no recuperative good from it. Sometimes she is too weary even to enjoy the picnic. So don't exhaust your power of enjoyment before starting off.

Second—be dressed for the occasion. Wear simple sport clothes, avoid appearing in party frocks. They don't make you look your best, because they are unsuitable, and attention is attracted to that element critically, not to the person. Also suit your clothes to the weather. To wear garments too heavy for the temperature is uncomfortable, and those too thin are scarcely less so. In either instance colds may result. A light-weight frock with a sweater, or "woolly" as the English say, is a good combination.

Shoes with french heels are for dress occasion, not outings, so wear sport shoes with their lower and broader heels which do not prick the ground. Low common sense heels do not suit every woman's foot any more than do high heels, but if your foot takes a high heel, it should be the sport shoe type, not the french heel shape, for picnic wear.

And last in order of comment, although not in account, is the proper food. Just what this should be cannot be decided at random, for picnics vary in style. There are some at which hearty sandwiches, cookies or cake, and fruit, with cold or hot beverages, are just the thing. There are other picnics where slices of meat, buttered rolls, a salad, hot or cold beverages, ice cream and cake, fruit, etc., are desirable. Whatever the food, have enough, but not a lavish quantity. Left-over picnic food is not tempting. Remember that appetites crave main course foods rather than frills.

"Sausage Cases" in Use for Packing Ice Cream

The difficulties of serving ice cream cheaply and conveniently may be solved by packing the perishable substance in sausage cases. Ice cream sausage has been found to save time and expense, while assuring perfect sanitary conditions. With the aid of a special filling machine the transparent cases are tightly packed with ice cream by the simple expedient of turning a crank. The sausage container may be used for all kinds of ice cream, water ices and frozen fruits. The new packing idea has been demonstrated at the Leipzig fair, proving highly successful. Instead of dishing out the ice cream, the customer buys a foot or a yard of ice cream sausage. The ice cream may be served in links of any desired thickness or length to suit the convenience of the dealer or the ultimate consumer.

Now Conquering Auto Ousts the Elephant

How modern transportation is advancing into every part of the world, says Popular Mechanics Magazine, is demonstrated in Ceylon, where the automobile is challenging the elephant. Ceylon's known history begins with the Sixth century before Christ. It is a large island lying 55 miles southeast of the extreme southern point of India in the Indian ocean.

The native inhabitants of Ceylon are the Singalese, who are Buddhists, a gentle and peaceable people. The men have the custom of dressing somewhat like women. There are 600 miles of railroad and excellent automobile roads. Several thousands of elephants roam wild through the island's forests, large numbers being tamed for duties as beasts of burden.

For centuries the elephant has been the principal means of travel in the island, but the introduction of the automobile, the truck and the filling station, that necessary aid to modern travel, is fast relegating the elephant to a secondary place. Many elephants are still in service, of course, and the great beasts may be seen daily passing gasoline stations located on motor roads.

British Military Party Felt Depression of 1815

If we think depressions are 1930 upstarts, we need only to take a trip to Drummond island in the St. Mary's river and turn back its pages of history to learn that more than 100 years ago a colonel in the Britthe army, an enthusiastic boomtide builder, brought about a few hardships by his dream of cornering Great Lakes' trade, Jack Van Coevering writes, in the Detroit Free Press.

The facts concerning this episode were dug up by B. Frank Emery, secretary of the Old Forts and Historic Memorial association, and had it not been for him, this little story would remain neglected and almost forgotten with the island itself.

Away back in 1815, the year after Great Britain and Uncle Sam had made peace, Lieutenant Colonel McDonall, commander of the British fort at Mackinac island, received the news that Mackinac had gone to the Yankees under the treaty. He had to find a new fort for his country, and having his mind set on bigger and better strongholds, he ferried to Drummond island, which commanded the traffic of the lakes. Here he started his building operations, despite the fact that the British exchequer sent no cash for the purpose.

By the time the second winter came, things began to slip. Perhaps credit became tight. Certainly fresh meat and vegetables, lime juice, and even vinegar ran out altogether. The men contracted scurvy, for they were subsisting wholly on salt provisions. Surgeon Mitchell tells that the meats had become unwholesome, and by the latter part of June, 14 men had died

John J. Bigsby, who visited the fort in 1826, indicates that the depression was beginning to lift, for he writes of the following menu:

"A small square lump of highly salted beef, a bowl of stewed pudding and two dishes of potatoes were both dinner and dessert. I was astonished. This was followed by poor Spanish wine. It appeared that contrary winds had retarded their supplies. Such is military life on a detached service."

If Mr. Bigsby is to be believed, the depression lifted completely when the birds returned in spring. Perhaps with a bit of overenthusiasm, he says: "Pigeons and ducks at certain seasons were so plentiful that it is said, but I do not vouch for the fact, that one had only to fire up the chimney and a couple of ducks would fall into the pot."

Such is the story of Colonel McDonall. Today one may stand on the spot he selected, 100 feet above the water, from which his guns were to sweep the channels of commerce. When the shadows of evening fall, one sees the lights of five beacons of peace shine across the waters—the lighthouses of our own government service.

Marvel of the Rockies, as Geologists See It

Following two years of study in the field, geologists of Northwestern university have been able to determine the sequence of events that brought about the formation of the Rocky mountains.

Profs. J. T. Stark and C. H. Behre conducted the survey.

"Before the mountains began to form into their present shape," said Behre, "there was a flat area of sea bottom, into which the gravel and sand from nearby higher country was being poured.

"At the end of that time, called the Age of Reptiles, a pressure caused by the earth contracting was exerted along the sides of the area. Hot molten lava from inside the earth was forced in between layers of rock and the surface bulged upward into the beginning of the mountain chain.

"Finally, as the side pressure became too great, the rocks were folded and broken. The cracks ran down toward the center of the earth. These were huge north-south cracks, inclined downward toward the east, and the rocks of the eastern side moved upward with respect to those on the west."

The geologist then told how great molten masses from inside the earth forced their way outward along these cracks.

New Ideas Expected to Aid Weather Prophets

Air mass analysis, methods for which have been developed largely during the last decade, is rapidly assuming an important place in forecasting the weather. Greater detail in observational material than is ordinarily available is necessary for such forecasting.

The air-mass analysis method of forecasting calls for the study of two or more conflicting masses of air, usually of widely different origin, and consequently of different characteristics as to temperature and moisture, which come together along what is called a line of discontinuity, a polar front, or a wind shift.

Air over polar regions, of course, is much colder than that over tropical regions. The transition, however, is neither gradual nor regular. Instead, large masses of air in one or the other region become supercooled or superheated. These masses develop into "surges," or "bulges," that meet along an irregular line. Because they differ structurally in temperature and moisture, and therefore density, the masses do not mix in an orderly fashion but tend to preserve their own identities. This results in a battle for supremacy, which forms the ever-changing drama that is our weather.

The air from the polar regions is cold, dry, heavy, and relatively cloudless. That from the tropical regions is warm, moist, relatively light, and cloudy. At the line where they meet, the advancing tropical air, being warm, moist, and therefore lighter, is forced to ascend and flow northward over the wedge of cold air at the surface. This is called the "warm front." The air as it rises is cooled by expansion, and the moisture in it is condensed into clouds from which rain or snow may fall. The amount and duration of this precipitation depend on several factors, including wind direction, amount of moisture, slope of air wedges, and rapidity of warm air ascent.

Along the "cold front" the advancing polar, or cold, air forms a wedge or thrust under the warm air, and the precipitation is squally, usually, however, covering only a comparatively small area.

Accompanying these precipitations are marked and sudden changes in temperature and wind, followed by a more or less steady state until the next meeting of conflicting air masses, when the drama is re-enacted.

CLIMATE ONE OF GREAT FACTORS IN MAN'S STORY

The region around the North sea has the world's best climate for human health and activity, according to Dr. Ellsworth Huntington, research associate in geography at Yale university.

He gives the next best rating to the northeastern United States, particularly that part on the coast, to the Pacific coast around Puget sound and in a very narrow coastal strip southward, and to New Zealand.

"The best condition for man," Doctor Huntington says, "is summer weather with an average day and night temperature of about 64 degrees, which means up to 70 or more by day. This is the best temperature for physical health. Although we are unconscious of it, the birth-rate shows that reproduction takes place more rapidly at this temperature than at any other.

"Among people who live as we do, mental activity is greatest when the outdoor temperature averages much lower. Even though we work indoors, the outdoor temperature affects us so that we work best in weather averaging about 38 degrees, that is, when there are mild frosts at night.

Doctor Huntington points out that temperature is not the only factor in producing the best climate.

"We need plenty of atmospheric humidity except at high temperatures," he continues.

Doctor Huntington believes that climate plays a major role in the history of mankind. "Other things being equal," he says, "each living thing does best in its own optimum climate. Even the germs of fevers follow this rule."

He believes that the optimum in climate varies only a little for various groups of people, and that "because of all this, the distribution of civilization throughout the world is almost identical with that of what we may call climatic efficiency.

"Maps of health, automobiles, education and many other activities point to this conclusion," he continues, "for they all show the climatic pattern. A country like Russia, in spite of all the recent changes, still stands where one would expect on the basis of climate."—David Dietz. Scripps-Howard Science Editor, in the New York World-Telegram.

New Health Food

The newest health food is seaweed. What's more, it comes across the ocean with a reputation for delicate flavor.

A company was recently formed in Swansea, South Wales, to conduct this novel industry. The seaweed used, which is of a special type, is locally known as laverbread. It is gathered off the rocks between tide marks on the coast of South Wales and Cornwall. Purple in color and turning dark green or olive when boiled, it is rich in calcium and iodine, possessing also a percentage of chlorophyll.

It is served as a vegetable with lemon juice or vinegar, butter and pepper.

PANAMA NOW A RACIAL MELTING POT OF WORLD

Panama is one of the infants among the republics of the western hemisphere, both in area and age, according to a bulletin issued by the National Geographic society.

"Columbus cruised in Panamanian bays on his fourth voyage in search of a short cut from Europe to Cathay," says the bulletin. "Balboa chose to cross this lean neck of land to discover the Pacific ocean. Later it enjoyed high rank among the leading Spanish colonies of the world because rich colonists on the west coast of South America preferred to transfer across it rather than to 'double' Cape Horn as a part of a commercial route to Europe; but Panama's outstanding era of economic and political advancement has been since 1903, when the area changed from a department of Columbia to an independent state.

"Shaped like a crawling caterpillar, with its head touching Costa Rica on the north and its tail reaching southward to the forested mountains of Colombia, Panama is well known to few people beyond its borders because its fame is overshadowed by the importance to the world of the Panama canal and the Panama Canal zone. The canal zone, however, is merely a ten-mile-wide strip across the isthmus, while the republic covers an area equal to that of the state of Maine.

"Panama's population centers have become racial melting pots. On the streets of the capital, the American traveler may be jostled by men from India, China, Japan, Malasia, the East and West Indies, the South Sea islands, and nearly all the countries of Europe and South America. A recent census reported that there were some 3,000 orientals, 52,000 whites, 86,000 negroes, 33,500 Indians, and 268,000 Mestizos, in the republic."

Arizona "Canaries" Back

An old saying runs that the mule conquered the great Southwest. Mules were the motors that hauled in the prairie schooners. Burros bore the prospectors into the mountains and then packed the gold out again. The Arizona canary is being brought back to discover new veins of gold.—Los Angeles Times.

TRUE HUMOR NOT OFTEN ACHIEVED BY FORCED WIT

The one great quality that a humorist must have is an insight into human nature. Some, like Mark Twain, develop it through a life of varied occupations and interests. Such writers keep themselves fresh and interesting by getting out among people of many and different kinds in different sections of the country. They are constantly restoring themselves. Perhaps a humorist, to be at his best, should be also a rolling stone. Certainly many of the best have been.

It is possible, but it may not be so easy, to acquire wit and wisdom by staying at home. But a writer with aspirations to humor can very infrequently reach a high level by racking his brains for odd similes, bright wisecracks and strained nonsense. True humor is not achieved thus, no matter how conscientiously one may try.

This is not to say that topical humor, based on the news of the day, cannot reach literary heights. It sometimes does, as witness Finley Peter Dunne's old philosopher friend, "Mr. Dooley." Mr. Dooley's comments were almost wholly confined to subjects current in the news of his day 30-odd years ago, but his shrewd sagacity and homely philosophy render his comments pertinent to events of today, which is the reason quotations from Mr. Dooley are still so often encountered.—Boston Globe.

Modern Youth All Right

Is the younger generation dumber than its predecessor? Are fathers and mothers right who harangue their sons and daughters about how much smarter papa and mamma used to be in school or college?

Harvard scientists conducted an 18 months' research on the subject, and the results were reported in the American Magazine. The average son is a better man than his father, and the average daughter has the edge on mother.

The facts have been gathered from records at Harvard which go back to 1870. For data on mothers and daughters, similar records came from four leading women's colleges.

The assembled material shows that the average American boy or girl is more intelligent, taller, heavier and healthier than was his father or her mother, at the same age.

NAZI COMMANDMENTS

The nine commandments of the Nazi are as follows: (1) One for all: First for every one a job; then for every one his job. (2) For the German youth: Take a spade in your hand and go out on the land. (3) For German girls: Take hold of kettle, broom and pan; then you'll readily get a man. (4) For the worker: Take work of any kind, however rigorous, for that alone makes you and the nation vigorous. (5). For the professional woman: Shop and office leave alone; your real work is in the home. (6) For business leaders: A grumbler deprives of bread himself and others, an optimist conquers all business bothers. (7) For housewives: Don't steal your time away from child and husband; get help by hiring a domestic servant. (8) For the peasant: The harder a state fares, the more soil must be cultivated (Frederick the Great). (9) For servants of the state: Whoever still remains a bureaucrat does not fit in today's combat.

Troop 28 Enjoy Camp

Troop 28, of the Trinity Episcopal church, C. B. Sadler, scoutmaster enjoyed a splendid full week of camping at Camp Fletcher, near Lake Cuyamaca, recently. Arriving in camp Saturday noon just in time to get out the mess gear and fall in for noon meal. They were assigned shortly after to the tents just in time to escape a downpour of rain. All slept cold that night. Sunday was a beautiful day and a morning service, nonsectarian, was held in a near by grove. Swimming pool in the afternoon, and a hike to the Engineers bridge. Supper and what a supper.

Evening campfire with its songs, jokes and stunts. Monday was kitchen police. There is lots of work and fun to feed 175 hungry boys, all clamoring for seconds except those who are back for thirds. Tuesday a swell hike to Cuyamaca peak where the ranger pointed out and called by name all the adjoining valleys and mountains. Wednesday, in camp, nominally. Tent inspection, horseback ride, swim, ballgame and campfire. Thursday a hard hike to North peak by the old trail which is quite rough and steep. By this time the weather has changed and the nights are warm. Friday wood detail which means take out the axe and two-man saw and the long rope and bring back a lot of logs for the fires. Swim in the morning, and in the afternoon a comedy track meet, with all events crazy, like carrying big potatoes in little spoons, scouts crawling in between the rungs of ladders and the like. At sundown a parade of the entire camp in column of fours headed by a brass band try-to split their lungs playing "My Old Man". And that night the head ranger of the fire suppression division of San Diego county gave a long talk on forest fires. Saturday came around all too quick, just time to get stamped on scout belts the emblems earned clean up the tent, tie up the bed rolls when the truck honked. Twenty happy, tired scouts declare that Bill Downey is the best cook they ever ate after.

GAME WARDEN WARNS REGARDING TAKING OF CLAMS

T. F. Maddox, superintendent of the San Diego office of the fish and game department, notified the News office Wednesday, that it is unlawful to take clams less than 5 inches in diameter and not more than 15 in a day or more than 30 a week.

He claims he will make investigations and if necessary arrests, in order to enforce this law.

CHURCHES OF CHRIST, SCIENTIST

"Love" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon on Sunday in all branches of The Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. The Golden Text is from Isaiah: "He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young."

Among the Scriptural citations in the Lesson-Sermon are the verses from I John: "Beloved, let us love one another: for love is of God: and every one that loveth is born of God, and knoweth God. He that loveth not knoweth not God, for God is love. . . . No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us. . . . And this commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God love his brother also."

One of the passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, says, "When we realize that there is one Mind, the divine law of loving our neighbor as ourselves is unfolded; whereas a belief in many ruling minds hinders man's normal drift towards the one Mind, one God, and leads human thought into opposite channels where selfishness reigns."
